MEMORIAL

Of the Jesuit Father

John Baptist GIRARD,

AGAINST

AND THE

Attorney General, Plaintiff.

IF the Accusation formed against Father Girard makes so great a Noise in the World; if it is become the Subject of Conversation throughout all France, and perhaps, even in foreign Countries, it cannot be denied that this Alarm is the Effect of the industrious and continual Pains which la Cadere and her Adherents have taken to divulge it by all manner of Methods. It is agreed, 'tis true, that the Publick, who are naturally curious and inquisitive, especially about singular and extraordinary Incidents, have the more readily been prepossessed against the principal Object of this Affair, as no Stone has been left unturn'd to represent him after such a Manner as was most likely to impose upon their Credulity. We flatter ourselves, nevertheless, that these Matters of Fact related simply, and without Art, and supported by unanswerable Proofs, will, without Difficulty, re-establish, or rather confirm that exalted Reputation of Virtue, which Father Girard had so justly acquired by his Zeal and Labours, for the Salvation of Souls; and that all the Fictions which have been invented, with Intent to lessen or destroy it, will soon be defeated.

To this End we will follow, with very little Variation, the same Order which the Author of la Cadriere's Memorial has observ'd before us. First then, we will relate the Matter of Fact, just as it is, and with the strictest Veracity; next we will confute the different Heads of the Accusation formed against Father Girard; and lastly, we will endeavour to discover the Source of these Accusations, and the Motives which produced them; and we hope, that from all these Parts conjoin'd together, there will result such a strong Conviction of his Innocence, that even those Persons who have been prejudiced against him, will be forced to own it, and conceive a just Indignation against the Authors of the Calumny.

As

As for the rest, as 'tis a Priest, and even a Regular, who is going to speak in his own Defence, or at least, who will be supposed to speak ; and one who, notwithstanding the Imputations wherewith his Doctrine and his Morals have industriously been loaded, is constantly attached to the Principles of his Religion, and the Practice of the most rigid Virtue ; we will keep a strict Guard upon our Expressions, and far from dipping our Pens in Gall and Bitterness, will omit nothing that may preserve the most sacred Laws of Charity, and the strictest Decency.

The C A S E.

FATHER Girard, after ten Years Residence in the City of Aix, where he had acquired a distinguished Reputation, as well for his Virtue as for his uncommon Talent in preaching, was sent to Toulon, to be Rector of the Seminary of the Chaplains of the Navy, and arrived there April 8. 1728. The Fame of his Merit had got there before him ; and his Presence, together with some Sermons which he was immediately desired to preach, increased the great Opinion that had been conceiv'd of him. The Confessional of Father Alexis, the discalceated Carmelite, was soon forsaken, and most part of the Devotees of the third Order of Saint Theresa, would have no other Director than Father Girard.

Of these Mary Catherine Cadere seem'd the most forward. This young Woman, who was then but about eighteen or nineteen, had for some Years distinguish'd herself amongst her Companions, by whom she was firmly believed to have an extraordinary Gift of Prayer, and to receive uncommon Graces from Heaven. Father Alexis, the Director of the third Order, often call'd her another Saint Catherine of Sienna; and as she sometimes happen'd to swoon away in the Chapel of the third Order, the same Father Alexis used to term these Faintings the Caresses of the Divine Spouse, and her Companions stiled them Strokes of the Divine Love.

In order to acquire Credit with her new Director, and gain the Preheminence in his Esteem above all his other Penitents, she pretended to have Visions and Revelations; and declar'd to him, That the Motive which induced her to choose him for her Confessor, was because that one Day, as she was coming out of the Carmelites Church, where they had been celebrating the Canonization of St. John of the Cross, our Saviour told her, in express Terms, and in a very distinct Voice, pointing to him; That is the Man whom I have appointed to guide you to me, Ecce Homo: These are the Words which she always made use of in relating this Fact, which she has told a thousand Times.

F. John Baptist Girard.

People who are conversant in the World, might take this first Step of Cadiere to be a Sign of the Weakness of her Understanding; but it is not to be thought surprizing if Persons more particularly devoted to Religion, and trained up a considerable Time in the Simplicity of the Gospel, are of another Opinion. Being persuaded, as they are, that the Arm of the Almighty is not shortned, and that he can even now manifest the same Miracles which he wrought formerly, for the Increase of his Glory, and the Consolation of his Elect, they are more easily induced to believe the extraordinary Things that are related to them. Wherefore, Father Girard was far from suspecting the Truth of what he heard, but contented himself with suspending his Judgment, and without determining any way about the Reality of this pretended Vision, thought he might take Advantage thereof, to incite this Soul to a greater Love of God, and a more perfect Self-denial, as may be seen by his Letters produced in the Course of the Proceedings.

It is proper to observe here en passant, that la Cadiere has inform'd several Persons, and particularly some Nuns at Ollioules, who must have depos'd it in the Proceedings, That long before Father Girard's Arrival, God had shewn her this Father plainly in a Vision, and told her his Name, declaring, at the same Time, that he would one Day send him to be her Director.

The first Year of this Direction passed over without any thing extraordinary being observed in her Conduct ; but towards June 1729, after having filled her Head with reading the Lives of St. Theresa, the blessed Angela de Foligny, of St. Catherine of Sienna, and of Genoa, &c. which she had from other Hands than her Confessor, she attempted to imitate, and even to surpass them ; she went more frequently to the Sacraments ; she seemed more regular, and more fervent ; soon after she had intimate Communications with God ; nothing now was heard of, but inward Lights, Consolations, and signal Favours.

Father Girard looking upon her then as a privileg'd Soul, and believing, perhaps, that he now saw the Effects of the first Vision whereof she had inform'd him, apply'd himself more particularly to direct her ; and la Cadiere being very sensible that she should meet with every thing in her Confessor that was requisite to her succeeding in her Design, began to act the Part she had resolv'd on, after the Manner following.

She had read in the Lives of the Saints, and especially of those above-mentioned, that before their Raptures and Extasies, they had pass'd thro' very fiery Tryals, so far as to be haunted and beaten by Devils. Wherefore, before she set up for working Miracles, she resolv'd to undergo these Tryals ; and, in order to impose the better upon her Director, inform'd him, That she had seen, in a Vision,

a Soul in a State of mortal Sin, and that our Saviour told her, he would have Mercy upon it, if she would suffer for it, offer herself as a Victim, and consent to be tormented by evil Spirits in a State of Possession, as she calls it in her Account of the Case.

Father Girard, not thinking his Penitent strong enough, nor sufficiently advanced in Virtue to support such an extraordinary State, did not approve of this pretended Sacrifice ; but she being willing to shew her Director that she had more Virtue and Courage than he imagined, persisted boldly in her first Design ; and towards the End of November 1729, the spiritual Consolations and sensible Graces, which she had for some Months experienced in such Abundance, ceased on a sudden, and gave way to Dryness and Barrenness ; her lively inward Light was succeeded by a dark Night of the Soul, as St. John of the Cross terms it ; soon after she complain'd of being haunted by the Devil ; who, by her Account, disturb'd her Mind, deprived her of the Power of applying herself to any thing, or to pray ; fill'd her with black and afflicting Thoughts, and Temptations to Incontinency, which is somewhat difficult to comprehend, since she now affirms, That she does not even know what is meant by impure Thoughts. La Cadiere's Pains and Torments increased, instead of diminishing ; the Devil went so far as even to afflict her Body ; she had Convulsions, Distortions, was deprived of Speech, and of all her Senses, which, she said, was the Effect of the extreme Pains she was forced to suffer.

Then it was that Father Girard was first sent for to her House, and he has more than once been a Witness, as well as her Mother and Brothers, of her miserable Condition.

We have forgot to take Notice, that she had two Brothers Clergymen, one only a Secular, and the other a Jacobin; the latter having taken the Degree of Batchelor of Divinity at Paris, had been come back to Toulon two Months before la Cadiere began to be possessed; they both seem'd equally affected with their Sister's Condition, came each of them frequently to the Jesuit's College, and begg'd Father Girard earnestly to visit her.

Thus did la Cadiere counterfeit being possessed and beaten by evil Spirits, from the End of November 1729, till about the Middle of February 1730, when she took the Opportunity of the Death of Sister Remusat, a Nun of the Visitation of Marseilles, who died with the Reputation of a Saint, and whom Father Girard directed by Letters, to turn to Advantage her Deliverance from Possession, and render it more remarkable. Accordingly she pretended, That Sister Remusat had appeared to her in the midst of a Company of Angels, and happy Spirits, and had delivered her from the Power of the Devil; and in order to insinuate the Belief of this new Vision, after the most flattering and delusive Manner, into Father Girard, whose Veneration for Sister Re-

musat she well knew, either she, or her Brother the Dominican, composed a Memorial, containing what God discovered to her concerning this holy Nun; which Memorial she delivered into the Hands of her Director, and which had the desired Effect.

The Deliverance of la Cadere from Possession, by the Prayers of Sister Remusat, happened too near Lent 1730, for that, which is a Time of Penance and Mortification to the Generality of Believers, to pass over without being a new Source of Miracles to her; accordingly it was this very Lent, whereof she, or the Dominican her Brother, composed the Journal produced in the Course of the Proceedings, which abounds with so many extraordinary Events. One must transcribe it entirely to shew how far the Extravagance of a Girl will extend, who is possessed with the impious Frenzy of passing for a Saint. 'Tis enough to observe here, that she therein pretends to have passed all that holy Season without taking any other Nourishment than Water; altho' it hath been proved, that she has eaten, both in Presence of her Brothers, who composed the Memorial, and in Secret, as she has been obliged to own; that the Contemplation of the Sufferings of Jesus Christ, and the Sins of Mankind, had made her lose a prodigious Quantity of Blood, altho' Father Girard always saw her in the same State of Health, and without any Faintness; that she received a Wound on her left Side of contemplating upon the Heart of Jesus Christ pierced in several Places ; that she received the Communion twice or thrice after a miraculous Manner ; that two of her Ribs were raised up considerably in a Transport of divine Love ; in fine, that on Maundy Thursday at Night, she fell into a Trance which lasted till the Saturday following, during which she accompany'd our Saviour, in Visions, thro' all the Mysteries of his Passion ; that, like him, she was scourged, crowned with Thorns, nailed to a Cross ; that she died, descended into Limbo, arose again, and ascended with him into Heaven ; and that ; whilst she really imagined herself in Paradise, God gave her to understand, that for his Glory she must again return upon Earth ; that Saint Theresa and Saint Clare both demanded her of the Lord for their respective Orders ; that Saint Clare having obtained that Favour, she recovered from her Trance, got up, having been in Bed all the Time of the Vision, eat voraciously, and walked about without being incommoded by her Wounds ; for she pretended, that having been crucify'd in the Vision, she had really felt all the Pain of that Punishment ; and that the Marks of the Wounds still remained in her Feet, almost like the Stigmata of Saint Francis ; and that she should have had them in her Hands likewise if she had not prayed our Saviour not to permit it ; which Favour she did not ask for the Crown of Thorns, the Print whereof was visible round her Head.

One may judge, by this Sample, of the Body of the Work, and of la Cadriere's surprizing Character; it must be owned, that one cannot enough wonder that Father Girard, so discerning as he was, should conceive no Mistrust of this Girl, whose Artifices appeared too evident by the Singularity of the Facts and Visions related by her; but being, as he was, a good Man, wholly wrapt up in Contemplation, and full of God's Goodness to his Creatures, he believed such Things possible, and that, to him, was sufficient.

Some Time after this Multitude of extraordinary Incidents, she declared to Father Girard; that God designed to manifest himself to her after a Manner entirely new; that it was necessary she should die to see him as he really is; that she should lose all her Blood by little and little; that she should fall into an extream Weakness; and that she should be crucify'd a second Time by Love, as she had before been by Justice.

Accordingly, May 7, at Night, she informed her Mother, that next Morning she should see something extraordinary, wherefore she put on clean Linen, and had her Bed sheeted, in order to receive, as she said, the Lord's Visit with Decency.

Next Morning she sent her Mother out of the Way on some Pretence, and at her Return, which was above Half an Hour after, she found her Daughter specchless, without the Use of her Senses, and her Face covered with Blood, as on Good Friday. Hereupon
Father

Father Girard was sent for, as well as her Brother the Dominican, and some Devotees, but he retired soon after. About ten o'Clock she repeated at full Length, as her Brother the Jacobin said, the Mass proper to the Apparition of Saint Michael, whose Festival was celebrated that Day, altho' the Devotees who were present, heard nothing distinctly, but the Lord's Prayer and the Belief. After this she made Motions with her Lips, as if she had been receiving the Communion, and pronounced the Blessing to the Assistants: Father Cadiere, who was on his Knees at his Sister's Bed's-head, during this Scene, assured M. Giraud the Parish Priest, and some others who happened to come in, that she had just been saying Mass, and that she had had Stigmata, Trances, and Visions; that, amongst other Things, she had seen a Vessel that was upon the Point of being shipwreckt in the Black Sea, wherein were three Jesuits, and a Man who seemed an Officer; that it being revealed to her that he was in a State of mortal Sin, she earnestly prayed our Lord Jesus Christ, who appeared to her over the Vessel, to be pleased to save it from Shipwreck, which was granted her; and that, as a Proof of this Miracle, the Bills of Lading were brought her by Angels, which she had delivered to Father Girard. It is true, that upon her relating this Vision to this Father, and his asking her for some Proofs of its being real, la Cadiere promised to make the Bills of Lading come into her strong Box; but

but it being impossible for her to work this Miracle, she at last extricated herself from this Difficulty, by telling him, that, as a Punishment for some trivial Faults which she had committed, the Angels had taken back the Bills of Lading; so that Father Girard never saw them, as she says in her State of the Case.

In the mean while la Cadiere, who had inform'd her Confessor ever since Easter, That as God had call'd her after a very particular Manner, as has been seen, to embrace the Order of St. Clare, could no longer defer it; wherefore she resolved to choose the Convent of St. Clare at Ollioules, a Town about a League from Toulon. But Father Girard, who was as yet in doubt, and durst not make any determinate Judgment of the pretended Miracle of her Vocation, was willing to try her for some Time, that he might be assured whether the Vocation came certainly from God; and 'twas during this short Space of Time, viz. From about the 25th of April, till the 6th of June, when she went to Ollioules, that all the most critical Facts which are objected against Father Girard happen'd. But if care is taken to give some Attention to the Circumstances of these very Facts, and the Motives upon which he acted, the World will cease perhaps to Blame, and begin to Pity him. After all, he is an upright Director, full of Zeal and Religion, who is prepossessed with an Opinion that his Penitent is a Saint, by the Knowledge which which he imagines he has of her inmost Thoughts ; one, whose Eyes and Ears are equally struck with a Multitude of Miracles, which our Saviour seems pleased to work in her ; one, who nevertheless is not fully assured thereof, and therefore endeavours to inform himself more and more. This is the Case which we conjure the Judges to keep in View, and the Disposition wherein one ought to read the Facts that are going to be related, in order to form a right Judgment thereon.

As for the rest, this is not a System forged at Pleasure to impose upon Mankind, and justify Father Girard's Conduct, the Proofs will be seen in this Father's Letters produced in Court, and subjoined at the End of this Memorial.

To begin ; La Cadere having assured Father Girard, that she miraculously lost her whole Mass of Blood, which must necessarily cause her Death, this Father not readily giving Credit to this pretended Miracle, because he could perceive no Symptoms thereof in her Face, or the Plight of her Body, which continued still the same, went to la Cadere's Chamber, where, the Door being first shut, she shewed him in an earthen Vessel, fit for such kind of Uses, a certain Quantity of a reddish and blackish Liquor ; after which, she set the Vessel out of the Room, as if to deliver him from its ill Smell. This Fact, as simple as it is, has, nevertheless, given Rise to one of the most outrageous Calumnies lunnies that Malice could invent against Father Girard ; they will have it, that this Liquor was the Effect of an Abortion ; that a Servant Maid, who was upon the Stair-Case, which joined to la Cadriere's Chamber, received this Vessel, and heard Father Girard cry out, What Imprudence ! Nevertheless, this Father protests, in all the Sincerity of his Heart, That he saw no Maid, and that he never open'd his Lips to speak the Words which they have put into his Mouth.

They affirm again, That some Porringers of Water which Father Girard gave her to drink, caused this Abortion. It is true, that la Cadriere pretending to be thirsty, when her Confessor was alone with her (in order to have Time to prepare herself for some Part which she design'd to act before him) he had the Charity to go himself to fetch her some Water in a Porringer ; and it was this pure, natural Water, which they would now convert into a Potion capable of being the Instrument of the blackest of Crimes.

Hereby one may see, that la Cadriere promised Father Girard every Day to make him a Witness of new Miracles, to remove all his Doubts ; sometimes, she said, That she was lifted up in the Air ; and that her Wounds changed their Colour and Shape according to the different Motions of Grace that operated in her : Sometimes, That she sweated Blood, which trickled down her Face from the Crown of Thorns, and that she would deliver him Caps stain'd with that

that Blood : At other Times she would shew him a Napkin, wherewith the Angels, as she said, had wip'd her Face, the Print whereof remain'd thereon, like that of Saint Veronica ; lastly, she pretended, That she would shew him her Stigmata, or put into his Hands a miraculous Cross, which she had received from our Saviour. All these Facts are evident, either from la Cadriere's Memorial, or the Letters produced in Court.

These were the Circumstances, and 'twas to assure himself of the Truth of these Facts, that Father Girard, as he freely owns, went sometimes to la Cadriere's House ; and as he was apprehensive, and not without Reason, that they would be divulged before he had himself examined them, he had the Precaution to lock himself in her Chamber, which Chamber was a very little one, adjoining to the Stair-Case, insomuch, that all that pass'd by, might easily have seen and heard what was done or said, if he had not taken Care either to shut the Door himself, or let it be shut by la Cadriere.

But whatever Measures Father Girard could take to conceal the Miracles which he thought God work'd in Favour of his Penitent, she told them privately to so many Persons, as well as her two Brothers, the Dominican and the Secular, that the Story was whisper'd secretly about the City ; and altho' it was only known as yet amongst a certain Number of devout Persons, Father Girard, to put a Stop to these Reports, Reports, engaged la Cadiere to put in Execution, as soon as possible, her Design of retiring into the Convent; to which End he wrote to the Abbess of the Nunnery of Saint Clare at Ollioules, the Letter produced in the Course of the Proceedings.

All Things being in Readiness for this Purpose, la Cadiere resolved previously to go a Pilgrimage to Saint Baume*, and pass thro' Aix and Marseilles.

As she had promis'd her Confessor to write to him from Aix, she found herself in some Perplexity, having already given him the Memorial about Sister Remusat, written by her Brother the Secular, and which she had pretended to be her own Hand. But her Brother the Dominican extricated her from this false Step; he composed himself at Toulon, the Letter that was to be sent from Aix, the Secular transcrib'd it, and deliver'd it to his Sister before her Departure; it is dated from Aix, May 19, and was produced in Court, under Father Cadiere's own Hand, and full of Blots and Erasurements.

La Cadiere set out May 17 with la Guiol and la Reboul, both Father Girard's Penitents; nothing remarkable happen'd in her Journey to Aix, except her being lifted up into the Air, as she affirm'd she was, in the Carriage wherein

in she travell'd. As soon as she arriv'd there, she bethought herself of her Promise to her Confessor; but, as in the Letter before mention'd, it was said, That la Guiol would subjoin a Word or two with her own Hand, la Cadiere having call'd for Pen and Ink, and pretended to write her Letter, asked la Guiol to send likewise a Word or two; whereupon she going to write, found no Ink in the Standish, and a very wretched Pen, upon which, expressing her Surprize to Cadiere, she ask'd, how she had been able to write? to which she answer'd, laughing, That she ought to have known that nothing was impossible to her. However, la Guiol, after abundance of Pains, could write no more than the two Initial Letters of her Name. Thus the Letter was sent back to the same Place where it was written, and la Cadiere set out for Marseilles, where Mademoiselle Rigord, whom Father Girard likewise directed by Letters, invited her to Dinner. But, just as they were going to sit down at the Table, la Cadiere fell into one of those Trances, which she knows so well, how to counterfeit; whereupon they were obliged to lay her upon a Couch, where she remain'd whilst the rest of the Company went to Dinner; which being over, la Guiol went up to see her, and finding her recover'd from her Trance, la Cadiere told her, That if she had staid with her in the Chamber, she would have had the Consolation to have seen her lifted up as high as the Ceiling.

On May 23, la Cadiere return'd to Toulon; and June 6, she enter'd the Convent at Ollioules; where she was receiv'd by the Nuns as a Person favoured by Heaven. Before her going to Ollioules, Father Girard had desired her to write down the extraordinary Graces which she pretended to have receiv'd in her Journey to Aix; the Dominican, who had written the Letter, compos'd also this Memorial, the Original whereof, under his own Hand, and cras'd in many Places, was produced in the Course of the Proceedings, and Father Girard receiv'd it written by the Secular Cadiere, who had transcrib'd it.

La Cadiere was no sooner admitted into the Convent, than Father Girard ask'd two Favours; one was, Leave from the Abbess to write to his Penitent, without the Letters on either Side being seen by any one, since they were to consist only of Spiritual Advice, and Secrets of Conscience; but the principal Reason, which Father Girard prudently conceal'd was, because he was apprehensive, that by these Letters, they might chance to discover something of la Cadiere's miraculous State, which he took the more Care to keep secret, inasmuch, as he was not as yet assured of the Truth thereof; and supposing it to be real, he was nevertheless willing to keep her humble. The second Favour he ask'd of Father Camelin, Confessor to the Monastery, which was, to Confess this Novice from Time to Time. They were both granted; insomuch, that Father Girard had both a Correspondence dence by Letters with la Cadriere, and came sometimes to visit her at Ollioules. The World may be convinced by reading these Letters, which are at the End of this Memorial, what were their Contents, and whether they favour, as is pretended, the horrid System which la Cadriere, and her Adherents, have had the Assurance to invent.

As for the Journey's which this Father took to Ollioules, they have been so greatly multiplied in la Cadriere's Memorial, that one would be almost tempted to give an exact Account of them here; but not to defer longer the Continuation of the Recital of the Matter of Fact, we shall content ourselves with observing, that the Number of these Journies shall be exactly set down in the Sequel of this Memorial.

From June 6, to July 7, nothing extraordinary happen'd to la Cadriere, excepting that, in one of her Letters of June 11, she mentions a vast Loss of Blood, whereof the Superior was a Witness; we shall see in the Sequel, that this Observation is not useless. But July 7, she play'd over-again, Word for Word, if one may be allowed that Expression, the Part she had acted at Toulon May, 8. She put on clean Linen the Evening before, and had her Bed sheeted; and next Morning she was found without Motion, without Sense, and her Face besmear'd with Blood; she likewise said Mass before all the Society, which had flock'd into her Chamber, and were

were kneeling round the Bed, made as if she received the Sacrament, and at last pronounced the Blessing; this Scene lasted till eight in the Morning. Father Girard, who happen'd at that very Time to set out from Toulon, in order to go to Ollioules, was no sooner got there, than the Nuns inform'd him of the Accident that had just befallen Sister Cadiere, or rather the extraordinary Event, whereof they had just been Witnessees; whereupon this Father immediately entered the Convent with Father Camelin, Confessor to the Monastery, and went to la Cadiere's Chamber. 'Tis proper to observe here, That Father Girard never enter'd the Convent, or the Chamber of his Penitent, but this once; and that the Door was so far from being shut, that the Nuns were continually going in and out, as they must have testify'd in their Depositions.

It is likewise proper to observe, That these pretended Transfigurations of la Cadiere, happen'd periodically between the Seventh and Ninth of each Month, beginning by that of Good-Friday, which was April 7; then returning on May 8 and June 9, (when we observed that she lost a great Quantity of Blood, whereof she did not think fit to make any Advantage,) and July 7, the Day whereon the Accident just before-mention'd happen'd.

As violent as it seem'd, it did not prevent her rising about three in the Afternoon, and accompanying her Confessor with Father Camelin, and a great Number of Nuns, to the Gate Gate of the Monastery. Being got there, she went a little aside to speak a Word to Father Girard, which, a Lay-Sister observing thro' a Window, she told a Maid who stood by her, That Father Girard kiss'd la Cadiere; to which the other answer'd, That she was mistaken. It is certain, as is well known, that Father Girard is entirely deaf of one Ear, and that he hears Confessions only on one Side; consequently it is necessary he should sometimes approach pretty near to hear what is spoken in a very low Voice, and this perhaps might give Occasion to the Lay-Sister above-mention'd to judge as she did; but other Reflexions will better evince the Falsity of this Accusation in the proper Place, as well as that of the Kiss given to la Guiol at the Gate of the Seminary: Let us go on.

From the Time of la Cadier's Transformation into an Ecce Homo, as they used to call it in the Convent, the Nuns, and her Brothers sent Accounts thereof every where; herein they did not fail, as it usually happens, to exaggerate the Matter of Fact, and embellish it with the most surprizing, and most moving Circumstances. There was now no End of Trances, Raptures, and Miracles, whereof they compos'd Memoirs; soon after, Multitudes of People flock'd to Ollioules, to see this new Saint; Regulars and Seculars of both Sexes, all hurried away, all posted thither; some even discover'd to her the Secrets of their Consciences, and some again pretended that she herself told them without Information, and they consulted her about Things to come.

In the mean while Father Girard was greatly grieved at the Noise and Alarm which his Penitent's pretended Miracles caused in the World. He became more reserved than ever, and grew more scrupulous of giving any Sanction to them, with so much the greater Reason, as he began to suspect their Truth, on account that la Cadiere had given him to understand, that she was desirous of quitting the Monastery; and he had heard a little after, that she had sent Word to her Mother, That if she did not come to take her out, she should soon be found dead. This gave Father Girard Occasion to write to her the Letter of July 26, which ought alone to be sufficient; one would think, to justify him from all that is laid to his Charge. He received an Answer to this on the 29th, wherein la Cadiere humbles herself, and asks Pardon for her Fault, which was granted her, but not in such a Manner as entirely to remove her Confessor's Suspicions: For he was the more confirmed in them, by la Cadiere's deferring the Delivery of the Memorial of her Visions and Revelations, and especially those which she pretended to have had the last Lent.

In order rightly to understand this Matter, which is one of the most important in the whole Proceedings, it is necessary to go a little back. Father Girard, after Easter, had order'd his Penitent to set down in Writing all the Visions and extraordinary Incidents whereof she had informed him in general ; because he intended to examine them at leisure, and satisfy himself more and more of the Operations of God within her ; she promis'd it him, but the Work went on very slowly, as will be seen immediately. When la Cadiere set out for Aix, Father Girard being afraid that, during her Absence, some-body might happen to see, and perhaps take away certain Papers of Devotion, and spiritual Direction which he had lent her for her Edification, with some Letters of Sister Remusat, and another Devotee still living, demanded of her all those Writings. Hereupon la Cadiere made up a Bundle of all she found in her Box, and carried them to Father Girard; who, being then employ'd about some other Affairs, took this Parcel of Papers, and, without examining them, put them into a Drawer, where he thought no more of them till the Information laid against him awakened his Curiosity. He was then willing to examine them, and was greatly surprized to find amongst them the four first Pages of the famous Lent Journal, written with abundance of Erasurements, in a Hand then unknown to him ; and which would have still been so, if one of the Fathers of the Seminary, who happened to have by him a Letter written by Father Cadiere to M. Camerle, an Ecclesiastick, had not shewn him plainly that it was the same Hand. These four Pages, under the Jacobin's Hand, were produced in Court, as well as the rest of the Memorial which la Cadiere delivered to Father Girard August 21, as we shall see in the Sequel.

La Cadiere, who, as has been just said, began in some Measure to lose her Confessor's good Opinion, had this Loss abundantly made up to her, by the extraordinary Name which the Reputation of her Sanctity had gained her in the World ; - and especially amongst the Nuns in that Monastery, who could never sufficiently admire, extol, or consult her. One Time, however, this exalted Reputation met with a severe Shock, and narrowly escaped being entirely blasted. Some Peaches having for several Nights been stolen out of the Nunnery Garden, the Abbess, who was informed thereof, set one to watch the Thieves ; hereupon la Cadiere was seen to open the Garden Door very dextrously, go in, eat as many Peaches as she pleas'd, and afterwards fill her Pockets, before she thought of returning ; but the Person who stood Centinel, had, in the mean while, shut the Gate softly, which could only be opened on the Inside ; insomuch that she had Time enough to raise all the Society, whilst la Cadiere, who was locked in, was thinking of some Expedient to extricate herself from this ugly Affair. Herein she succeeded very fortunately ; for most Part of the Nuns running to see who was the Thief, were amazed at the Sight of la Cadiere, and could not restrain the first Motions of Anger and Scandal which in crept in their Minds. But upon la Cadriere's telling them, that the Lord had inspired her with this Act of Gluttony, in order to humble her ; and had promised her, that if she had the Courage to resolve upon submitting to this Impulse of Grace, the Tree which she had stript of its Peaches should, for the future, bear infinitely finer Fruit, and in greater Quantity ; the innocent Nuns being confounded, soon repented of their judging her so rashly, and strove who should be the first to thank her for the Sacrifice which she had been pleased to make of herself, in order to stock their Garden with such a Profusion of fine Peaches.

It must be confessed, that the Nuns of Ollioules had not, as yet, made a sufficient Progress in contemplative Divinity, to comprehend, at first, this spiritual Refinement ; and accordingly it must be owned, that many of them have not since had so great an Opinion of la Cadriere's Sanctity as before.

One may judge by this artful Subterfuge of la Cadriere, whether a monastick Life suited with her Temper ; wherefore she solicited her Confessor afresh to approve of her leaving the Convent, and wrote him Word, *that being under a Necessity of * abstaining from Flesh all the Year with the rest of the Society, she should infallibly sink under it ; it being utterly impossible for her to swallow one Morfel of their Provision, or if by Chance she did get down a Bit, she was* immediately forced to throw it up again. But her Confessor not being to be moved, even by this Reason, and persisting still in his Resolution, That she should continue there, tho' he should be obliged to allow her to eat Flesh, if she found herself absolutely unable to live upon the Diet of the Convent, la Cadiere promis'd him a Miracle, which should evidently discover to him the Will of God, and to which he should be forced to yield. This was, That immediately her Body should be over-spread with Sores and Ulcers, which should disappear as soon as she should set Foot out of the Monastery; but this Miracle never coming to pass, he persisted in his former Resolution.

La Cadiere having thus exhausted in vain all the Stratagems she could devise to induce her Confessor to consent to what she desired so ardently, and despairing of attaining her Ends; discover'd to M. Camerle, an Ecclesiastick, her Design of making her Escape. She had the more Hopes of succeeding with him, as this Ecclesiastick seem'd to have a very great Opinion of her Virtue; but that she might not startle him at once, but might still preserve that advantageous Opinion, she made him believe, that God had called her to serve in the Hospitals at Rome, in order to humble her; and added, That if he would be her Companion in that good Work, she had 500 Crowns at her Disposal. To this he answer'd, That he was not as yet in Holy Orders, and that he design'd to be a Priest before he went to Rome; upon which la Cadiere reply'd, That that was not requisite ; and that whenever he was a Priest, the Bishop would not allow him to leave his Diocese. This happen'd at the Beginning of August, as is apparent from the Proceedings ; and on the 11th, which was the Eve of Saint Clare, Father Girard went to Ollicules in order to exhort the Nuns on Account of their renewing their Vows. He then expected that la Cadiere would have deliver'd him the Lent Journal, which she had promis'd he should have on that Day, but it was not as yet finished ; and her Director reproaching her sharply with the Delay, which increased his Suspicions more and more, she flew into a Passion, and went so far as to tell him, That since he took upon him after that Manner, she never would give it him at all ; after which she left him abruptly. Next Day, being the Festival of Saint Clare, she durst not venture to appear before him, but excused herself on Pretence of being employ'd in the Offices and Prayers of the Day, which occasion'd the Letter this Father wrote to her on the 15th ; wherein he reprimands her very severely for her Pertness ; whereupon la Cadiere ask'd his Pardon in a very submissive Answer.

At last, the so long expected, and so much desired, Journal of Lent was finish'd ; and Father Girard received it from the Hands of his Penitent, August 21, at Ollioules, whither he went by Order of the Bishop of Toulon. It must be own'd, that at the Sight alone of this this Writing, and even without having read it, this Father was very near being prepossessed with the same favourable Opinion of his Penitent's Sanctity, as he had before entertain'd so long; but that Impression soon vanish'd: For he had the Vexation to hear next Morning at Toulon, whither he return'd the Evening before, that this Journal, which he had desired should be kept as an inviolable Secret, and which was to have been communicated to him alone, was in a manner become publick. All his Measures being broken thereby, he began to suspect his Penitent's Hypocrisy more than ever; wherefore he immediately sent her a Letter to complain of her publishing this Memorial; he told her however, That if it had been taken without her Knowledge, he would advise her to complain thereof to the Superior; but added, That if she had herself given it to any other than himself, he had nothing more to say to her, she might do as she pleased, he was resolv'd to quit her; and desired that, let it happen how it would, she would send him by the Bearer, Mariane Gravier, all the Papers of spiritual Direction, and Letters which she had received from him. Upon reading this Letter, which she call'd diabolical before la Gravier, la Cadriere pack'd up all the Writings which Father Girard demanded, and gave them to the Bearer to carry to him. Some time after Father Girard found amongst those Papers a Copy of this Journal, written by Father Cadriere, with whose Hand he was not then acquainted, and which began but at the 10th Day of Lent, besides a great many Minutes of the Letters he had receiv'd from la Cadiere, written with the same Hand and blotted, which were all produced in the Course of the Proceedings.

Father Girard having afterwards perused this Journal very attentively, and having likewise reflected upon la Cadiere's Vanity and Pertness, whercof we have already taken Notice, at last open'd his Eyes ; and by degrees conceiv'd as much Aversion against her for her Hypocrisy and Impostures, as he had before had Esteem for her. But his Charity, and his Regard to his Superiors, kept him greatly upon the Reserve, and made him observe a profound Silence ; insomuch, that la Cadiere still enjoyed the same Reputation for Sanctity, which this Father saw with Sorrow, knowing, better than any one, that she very little deserv'd it. This partly determin'd him, besides his receiving an Order from his Superiors to return to Ollivules, and use his last Efforts to bring this wandering Soul into the Paths of a sincere Repentance : But no Motives being able to prevail over her, he took a firm Resolution to give her over entirely.

In the mean while la Cadiere was in no small Perplexity ; on one Hand, she was upon the Point of being abandon'd by a Director who was held in great Veneration at Toulon ; What then would have been thought of her Virtue ? Her Reputation would have

suffer'd by it infallibly : On the other Hand, it grew intolerable to her to stay any longer in the Convent ; to submit to observe the Rules of the Order ; and to maintain by farther Impositions, and a perpetual Constraint upon herself, the Character of a Saint, which she had assum'd. In this Extremity she thought it best to write to Father Girard ; and accordingly she sent him three Letters successively, on the 3d, 5th, and 9th of September, in order to try to prevail over his Resolution, that she should not leave the Convent. To these Letters he returned no Answer ; but happening to reflect a little after, that, perhaps, the Hour of winning her over to God was come ; and besides, not being able, without extreme Sorrow, to think of the inevitable Loss of a Person, for whom he had had so much Esteem, Goodness, and Condescension, notwithstanding the Resolution he had taken to abandon her for ever, he determin'd to make one more Effort to bring her to Reason. To this End he went to Ollioules, September 14, where he immediately enjoin'd her, as a Penance, to consecrate herself sincerely to the Lord, by embracing the austere Order of St. Clare. He afterwards gave her to understand, That a Conduct so natural, and so suitable to her present Condition, would infallibly prevent the Alarm that would inevitably follow the Execution of her Design ; and would put an End, by little and little, to the Report of those Miracles wherewith she had amused the Publick ;

He concluded with telling her, That the only Way that was left her to save her Soul, and preserve her Reputation amongst Mankind, was to have no Communication with the World, and to bury herself for ever in the Obscurity of her Retreat.

But la Cadiere, having no inward Motions of the Spirit of God, was far from hearkening to such prudent and holy Counsel ; she would not even confess to her Director, the Impostures whereof he was so fully convinced ; on the contrary, she still acted the Devotee, and insisted upon quitting the Monastery.

Hereupon Father Girard left her, and wrote to her next Morning, being September 15, the last Letter which she produced in Court ; wherein one may see, that this Father, in order to preserve her Reputation, as became a Director, suggests to her what Reasons she may alledge for changing her Confessor.

On September 16, la Cadiere left the Monastery ; and as she foresaw that her quitting the Convent, with Father Girard's having forsaken her, would not fail, as it accordingly happen'd, to make a great Noise in the City, she retir'd to a Country-House belonging to the Sieur Pauque, one of her Relations.

'Twas in this House that la Cadiere, with her Brothers, the Dominican, and the Secular, deliberated upon the Choice of a new Confessor. Father Girard had resolv'd to observe a profound Silence as to his Penitent's Miracles ;

cles; perhaps la Cadere had even inform'd her Brothers, that Father Girard was convinc'd of her Impostures; wherefore it was necessary for them to procure a Confessor who might give them fresh Life and Credit in the World, and set them upon such a Foot, as that they should neither be liable to Insult or Suspicion.

Father Nicholas, Prior of the discalceated Carmelites, seem'd fit for this Design; he was a Man of a lively, enterprizing Temper, who, contrary to the Custom of his Order, had attain'd to the Dignity of Superior at the Age of Thirty eight. He had distinguish'd himself, as he pretended, in the Jesuit's College at Avignon, where he first studied, and where they left no Stone unturn'd to persuade him to enter into their Society; but his nobler Sentiments had rais'd him to the Summit of Mount Carmel, whence he boasted, that he had more than once confounded the Jesuits, and had discover'd some of their Heresies in the publick Disputations at Lyons.

Father Nicholas, such as we have describ'd him, was propos'd to the Bishop of Toulon as Confessor to la Cadere, by her Brother the Dominican. This Prelate was then at his Country Seat, Saint Antonin, near that where la Cadere then was, and consented to that Choice, altho' he had but little Knowledge of this Carmelite. He was still talking thereof with Father Cadere, when Father Nicholas made his Appearance, on Pretence of presenting to him, him some Friars of his Convent at the next Ordination; whereupon the Bishop told him, That he had chosen him to Confess the Saint la Cadere, which new Employment, after some faint Resistance, Father Nicholas accepted.

The first Days of his Direction were soon follow'd by a new Miracle; Father Girard had been often ask'd, but always in vain, to shew the Cross which la Cadere had received from Heaven and put into his Hands. Father Nicholas being less reserv'd than Father Girard, and more earnest to satisfy the Veneration they had for this Cross, solicited his new Penitent so strenuously, that at last, after many Fastings, Mortifications, and Prayers, the same Cross which she had received from Heaven, and given to Father Girard, was found in her Box upon some Linen. It was immediately shewn about, and they who had seen the first, swore it was the same; all imaginable Honours were paid thereunto; it was kiss'd and kiss'd again a thousand Times; and they enjoy'd thus, very quietly, the Fruits of the new Outrage which la Cadere had committed against Heaven; when Father Girard thought fit to declare, that he still had the Cross in keeping, which she had given him; he accordingly produced it, and, at the same time, the Workman was discover'd who had made them both.

How great, upon this Discovery, was the Surprize of those who had paid their Devotions to the Cross; and how great the Confusion

Confusion of Father Nicholas, la Cadiere's Brothers, and la Cadiere herself! These last, being inrag'd against Father Girard, for having expos'd their Impostures in such an incontestable Manner, resolv'd to be reveng'd upon him: But what Revenge! Never was one more black, or more diabolical contrived.

It being impossible longer to preserve the Reputation of Sanctity which la Cadiere had 'till then assumed, it was resolv'd to impute to Magick all the extraordinary Things which had happen'd to her; as her Visions, her Trances, Revelations, Raptures, &c. and to make Father Girard the Primum Mobile of these Delusions of the Evil Spirit. Thus was this pious and zealous Director transformed, in an Instant, from a State of almost Angelical Holiness, to that of a vile Slave to Devils.

But as it was no easy Matter for the Accusation of Sorcery, wherewith they intended to blacken and ruin Father Girard, to gain sufficient Credit in the World, in such a discerning Age as that wherein we live, to convince Mankind of its being true; 'twas thought proper to subjoin to this extravagant Accusation, some Story that might affect them, and, at least, excite their Curiosity, if not their Malice. They added, therefore, That Father Girard had had Recourse to Sorcery, and had breath'd the evil Spirit into la Cadiere, only with Design to satisfy the brutal Passion which prey'd upon him, and enjoy her with the greater Safety;

Safety ; they thought also, by this Means, to save her Honour ; because she could not have been accessary to the Crime, and to represent Father Girard as the only Criminal.

Wherefore Father Nicholas, from that Time, look'd upon his Penitent as one possessed by the Devil, and who had Need of the Assistance of the Church ; he confer'd the same Honour upon Father Girard's other Penitents, declaring them equally possess'd, and in the same State with la Cadiere.

It must be own'd, that Father Nicholas was a great Admirer of Exorcisms ; accordingly he had soon Employment enough to satisfy him ; for la Cadiere having acted the Demoniac some Days after, in the Country-Seat where she still was ; Father Nicholas, who never stir'd from her, Night or Day, as must appear by the Proceedings, delivered her, in an Instant, from this Condition, by the Means of some Exorcisms ; the Charin was destroyed, the Stigmata vanished, the Hair grew in a trice upon the Place where there appear'd before the pretended Traces of the Crown of Thorns : After which, having desired to kiss some of the Wood of the real Cross, which Father Nicholas held in his Hand, and having accomplished her Desire, she said, That at last she beheld a purer Light, and that she seem'd now, for the first Time, to come out of the thickest Darknefs ; and that she knew her Deliverer, to whom she returned Thanks upon the Spot.

There

There remained now no other Glory for Father Nicholas to acquire, but that of conquering la Cadriere's violent Inclination to Father Girard; towards whom, she said, she found herself impell'd by a Power which she could not resist. But Father Nicholas, to work this last Cure, had no need to have Recourse to those Exorcisms which he had just before used with such immediate Success; he only very prudently desired her to consider, that both Father Girard's Person and Age were sufficient to disgust a young Woman like her. Would one believe it! this Speech, as simple and artless as it was, had the same Effect as the Exorcisms; the Inclination, or rather the Madness ceased, and was never more heard of since.

A little after her Deliverance, la Cadriere returned to Toulon, that is to say, on the 14th of October; as she knew better than any one Father Nicholas's Power of ejecting the Devil, she employed the first Days after her Arrival, in persuading all her Companions, who were Father Girard's Penitents, that they were possessed by an evil Spirit, and in soliciting them to be exorcis'd by Father Nicholas. On the other Hand, he was not idle himself; he went about to their Houses, discoursed them, and did his utmost to convince them that they had Need of his Assistance; but altho' he had asserted, that almost all Father Girard's Penitents had the Misfortune to be possessed, he could never, after abundance of Care and Pains, convince but two thereof; viz. l'Allemande, mande the Mother, and la Batarelle, upon whom he exercised as often as he pleased, and in every Place, his admirable Talent at casting out Devils; all the rest having absolutely rejected him.

L'Allemande the Mother, is an old Woman, at least Sixty-five, who,* although she was continually laughing, and that without Reason, very often saw the Devil, as she said, and always under a grotesque Figure.

La Batarelle is a young Woman about Twenty-three, of a weak Brain, and lively Imagination, who pretends to have Visions, and believes them very real; but if they proceeded from the Devil, 'twas not Father Girard who breathed him into her, since she had them above two Years before that Father came to Toulon, and that to every one's Knowledge.

All these Endeavours and Exorcisins could not be put in Practice so secretly but they got Vent; for it must be observed, that all that had been said or done till then, as the Possession and Exorcisins of la Cadriere, L'Allemande, and la Batarelle, had been performed in Secret and without Witnesses. But the earnest Applications that were made to Father Girard's other Penitents, as well as the injurious and indecent Expressions that were used in speaking of this Father, having discovered this Mystery of Iniquity, the Bishop of Toulon thought it his Duty to search into the Bottom of this Evil,

* Mr. Roberts's Translator has render'd rire aux Anges to have Intercourse with Angels; whereas it signifies only to laugh without Reason. What Nonsense!

Evil, and put a Stop thereto. To this End he order'd his great Vicar to make all the Inquiries possible, and afterwards use his Authority, according as he should think proper. Hereupon the great Vicar, after having punctually perform'd the Orders he had receiv'd, and having discovered that the Fathers Cadiere and Nicholas were the Authors of all these Proceedings, suspended them both.

This unforeseen Stroke so much exasperated the two Fathers, that they thought themselves no longer obliged to observe any Measures; but before they would proceed to Extremities, they resolved to try to appease the Bishop of Toulon, by promising him, that there should be no more Mention made of Sorcery, Possessions, or Exorcisms, if he would be so good as to revoke their Suspension. But this Prelate, understanding very well the Meaning of such Language, told them, that since they could dispose of Devils, and make them speak or be silent at their Pleasure, he did not think it proper to reinstate them.

Being deprived of this their only Hope, they gave themselves up to all the Fury where-with they were possessed.

'Tis reasonable to imagine, that these two Fathers only designed at first to ruin Father Girard, and thro' him all the Jesuits, in the good Opinion of the Bishop of Toulon, with whom, one may venture to say, they are in some Esteem: But not being able to succeed in that Design, they have since spared no Pains to decry them, in the Opinion of the Publick. In

In order hereunto, they stood in need of Evidence, by whose Means they might be able to support the Charge of Sorcery, which they designed to bring against Father Girard; intending afterwards from thence to conclude him guilty of Spiritual Incest. Wherefore, as the Possessions and Exorcisms already mention'd, happen'd in Secret, and without Witnesses, they contriv'd the Acting of the following Scene.

On the 16th of November at Night, that is to say, three Days after their Suspension, the young Priest Cadiere cry'd as loud as he could out of the Window, That his Sister was dying by the Hands of the Devil, who was strangling her. Hereupon Father Nicholas flew thither one of the first, and called for Assistance himself, all the Neighbourhood was soon alarmed, and la Cadiere's Room fill'd with People in an Instant. What a Spectacle was it for the Company! To see on one Hand la Cadiere stretch'd out upon her Chamber-floor, without Motion or Sense; and her Neck swell'd to that degree as to be almost even with her Chin; * and on the other Hand, the Ecclesiastick Cadiere, who had been in Priest's Orders but two Months, standing in his Shirt, with a violet Stole about his Neck, and holding a Holy-Water-Sprinkle, and a Ritual, which Father Nicholas had taken care to bring with him, whilst the Latter was himself holding a great Crucifix,

* This Mr. Roberts's Translator, page 34 renders with her Neck swell'd, and the Swelling sti'l rising towards her Mouth; whereas the French says, le col enflé, &c qui s'élevait presque jusqu' au Menton. An egregious Blunder.

Crucifix, and both together were bawling out, That la Cadiere was possessed, and had need of the Prayers of all good Christians. Hereupon all the Company fall immediately upon their Knees, they pray, they lament, and are frightened; during which the young Priest began to exorcise the Demoniac. At the same Time, the two Priests belonging to the Cathedral enter'd the Room with their Assistants; whereupon the Exorcism was suspended for a while, in order to yield them the Honour; but after having maturely examin'd her Condition, they declared openly, That they saw no Sign of Possession. A Surgeon, who happen'd to be present, was likewise of their Opinion; and ordered some Cupping-Glasses to be fetch'd from his House, which were no sooner brought, but the Disorder vanish'd, and she began to breathe, open her Eyes, and come to herself. They took the Advantage of this Interval to lay her upon her Bed; but it lasted but a very little while, before she began to twist her Arms, her Limbs grew stiff, her Eye-balls roll'd in her Head, and she distorted her Face more frightfully than before, and shriek'd out very loud. Thereupon every one was again terrify'd, and intreated the Priests of the Cathedral to begin the Exorcisms, which they still refuse, seeing no Necessity for them; nevertheless, to satisfy in some measure the Desires of the Company, they repeated the Litanies of the Virgin Mary, and when they pronounced these Words, Sancta Trinitas unus;

unus Deus. LA CADIERE said, God is a Spirit, there is no Trinity; when they proceeded to the Mysteries of our Saviour's Life, her Distortions increased; and lastly, when they said Agnus Dei, she answered in the Dialect of Provence, There is no Lamb.

Towards Midnight she was a little composed and quiet; whereupon the Priests of the Cathedral went away, as did likewise most of the Company.

At two in the Morning they ran again to fetch them; and that they might induce them to come, told them that la Cadere was dying. As soon as they entered the Room, her Brothers said, that she had spoken Latin, and said Non Credo; and that being asked who was the Daemon that tormented her, she answered, John Baptist Girard, and afterwards, The Devil of Uncleaness; that she had said another Time, That she had a Legion of Devils in her Body: But they took care not to inform them of a Passage, to which the Curiosity of one of the Spectators gave Occasion; this Person having told Father Nicholas, that the Latin which he spoke to la Cadere was too trite and easy to be understood, this Father, instead of Credis Diabolo? which Expression he had used till then, changed his Phrase, and ask'd, Credis Spiritui immundo? And as she was entirely silent hereupon, the Father concluded, that, since she made no Answer, 'twas a certain Sign she believed in the Devil, according to this Maxim which he quoted, Qui tacet consensire videtur. Then one of the two Priests approaching her, ask'd, Whence her Devil came, and how Father Girard, &c. To which she immediately answer'd, with a confident Air, I shall tell all that in its proper Time. Would you have me make my Confession here in Publick? In the mean while Father Nicholas was not idle: For whilst the Priest Cadiere continued exorcising her, this Father address'd himself to the Devil, and called out to him with a strong masculine Voice; Come out, thou Wretch, come out; and give Place to one who is stronger than thee.

Thus ended the first Part of this Scene, which lasted till Four in the Morning; when la Cadiere, being come to herself, desired to rest, as she did accordingly till *Nine the same Morning; but † then l'Allemande the Mother coming to visit her, immediately began to act the Part of a mad Woman and Demoniac, crying out, That Father GIRARD had appeared to her in the Carmelites Church. Here-upon la Cadiere, seeing l'Allemande act the Demoniac, began to do the same; and to spend in this violent Agitation, the Strength she had just recover'd by Rest. The whole Neighbourhood was again alarm'd; Father Nicholas came amongst the rest, and repeated before the Spectators all that had passed in the Night: But the unbelieving Priests of the Cathedral thedral were sent for no more. L'Allemande was not very alert in her Agitations; her great Age not permitting it: But la Cadriere, who was younger and nimbler than she, acted her Part to the Life; tumbled about the Floor, and shriek'd that she might be heard in the middle of the Street. This Spectacle lasted till Night, the Door of the House being open all the while, insomuch that it was successively fill'd with Persons of both Sexes, and of all Conditions, Citizens, Artizans, and Officers of the Navy; every one whereof ask'd la Cadriere such Questions as their Fancy and Inclinations led them, which she answered in such a manner as created both Curiosity and Scandal.

This publick Scene, which is designedly pass'd over in Silence in la Cadriere's Memorial, was the Occasion of the Bishop's sending his Great Vicar next Day, being the 18th, in Company with the two Priests of the Cathedral, the Proctor, and the Register, to inquire into all that had pass'd with respect to these pretended Miracles, the Possession, and the Exorcijms. [Messire Larmodieu, the Great Vicar or Chancellor, going to her House, examined la Cadriere concerning all these Facts; and the verbal Process being communicated to the Proctor, he, judging that it was the Duty of the Publick to take Cognizance of these Facts, presented a Petition to the Chancellor, that an Information might be lodg'd with the Civil Magistrate, of the Contents of the verbal Process, in order to discover the

Truth,

Truth, and punish the Guilty. La Cadere, on the other Hand, brought her Information before the Lieutenant Criminal of Toulon, against Father Girard, the Contents whereof she has related Word for Word, as she assures us Page 50, &c. of her State of the Case.

As this Information could not put a Stop to the Proctor's Proceedings, it was taken after the Form of the Edict of Melun, by the Chancellor, and the Criminal Judge, jointly, and the Witnesses call'd both at the Proctor's and la Cadere's Suit, were examin'd.

The Information was not yet closed, when, by a Decree of the Council of State of the 16th of January last, his Majesty refer'd to the Parliament of Aix the Cognizance of this Affair, to decide it finally, and without farther Appeal, according to Law, at the Suit of Mr. Attorney-General, and Mary Catherine Cadere, if they should think proper.

Mr. Attorney-General presented a Petition to prosecute this Affair in his own Name, pursuant to the Decree of Council.

By the Decree of Feb. 16, the Counsellor M. de Faucon, and M. l'Abbe de Charleval, Counsellor-Clerk, were appointed to go to Toulon, in order to prepare Matters, examine into, and give their Judgment on the Affair; and altho' la Cadere, before the Arrival of these Commissioners at Toulon, had prefer'd several Complaints against the Chancellor, and the Criminal Judge, for Refusal of Justice, on Pretence that not having any more Witnesses to interrogate, they ought to close the Information; nevertheless, several Witnesses were afterwards heard, at the Suit of the Attorney-General, and the Desire of la Cadriere, as she informs us, Page 64, of her State of the Case.

The Information being taken, the Commissioners cited la Cadriere, Father Nicholas the Carmelite, and Father Cadriere the Dominican, to appear personally, and summon'd Messire Francis Cadriere, the secular Priest, to appear either himself, or by his Attorney, as they did likewise Father Girard. All these Persons were afterwards examin'd, and the extraordinary Process was commenced and carried on.]

We are told, Page 64. of la Cadriere's State of the Case, That after having undergone the Interrogations of Feb. 25, and 26, when her Answers were conformable to her Deposition, they gave her a Glass of Wine fasting, which she found very Salt, and which intoxicated her to that degree, that she did not know her own Mother; and that having been examined in this Condition, she denied all the Facts contained in the said Deposition, which Denial she ascribes to this Glass of Wine, and to the Menaces and Violence which was used to her. But whom do they pretend to persuade that there are specifick Liquors, indued with such extraordinary Qualities, as to make the Persons who drink them say whatever they who prepare them please?

A Draught may make one either mad or stupid, but neither of these can be said to have been the Effect of this pretended Philter. For if la Cadere had been mad, the Commissioners would, no doubt, have perceived it, she neither could have answered, or signed her Answers, and her Examination must have been deferred; if she had become stupid, she could at most have answered only Yes or No. Yet those Interrogatories that were read to Father Girard, at the Time of his being confronted, (the Purport whereof he in general remembers,) consisted of long Answers, wherein she did her utmost to clear herself and her Relations, (of which she seemed to be very particularly mindful) and wherein she observed such Precautions as were beyond the Capacity of a stupid Person. La Cadere was therefore necessitated to find out a third Sort of Potion; whose Operation should determine the Drinker to such and such Things; and, in order to maintain such a singular Paradox, she is forced to have Recourse again to Sorcery, her usual Support and Refuge.

[After having persisted several Days in her Denial, being at last weary of maintaining the Truth, or rather intimidated by the Menaces of her Advisers, she retracted it; and after having undergone the extraordinary Process, was carried to Aix, and put into the Second Monastery of the Visitation, according to Orders from above] There she received, as she affirms, an Anonymous Letter, which she is pleased to charge upon the Jesuits; a new and very commodious Method of forming an Accusation, against which no-body can be secure, if it could be allowed; since it is in any one's Power to have several Anonymous Letters written to himself, and afterwards charge upon others, what was his own Act and Deed.

[The Proceedings being carried before the Parliament to be finally decided, la Cadriere, altho' she was cited to appear in Person, and co-accused, is nevertheless become Appellant, a Minimâ from the Writ of single Appearance served upon Father Girard, and also from the Citation to appear personally served upon herself, and the Proceedings which she supposes to have been carried on against her.

La Cadriere is become accessarily Appellant, from the Inroachments committed by the Chancellor in the Course of his Proceedings at the Proctor's Suit; she has since obtain'd the Royal Letters of Restitution as to the Confession made by her in her Answers of February 27, and in her Re-examination and Confronting on March 6.

We shall not here take Notice of the different Petitions presented to the Parliament by her Brothers, Father Nicholas, and herself; sometimes to be allow'd to answer afresh; sometimes to have a Copy of her Depositions, of the Interrogatories, and other Parts of the Proceedings; all which Petitions were rejected. We shall only observe, that that all these Steps of theirs were taken only in a kind of Derision of Justice ; since at the very Time that they all demanded a Copy of these Pieces, they had them in their Possession, as well as all the Proceedings.

This may be seen in her Memorial ; since they affect therein to quote, Word for Word, Scraps of the Witness's Depositions, even of those who were not confronted with them. From hence la Cadiere pretends to derive this Advantage in the Eye of the World, to persuade them, that all that is advanced in her State of the Case, is supported by the Depositions of the Witnesses ; whilst Father Girard, who has no other Knowledge of the Proceedings, but what he can recollect of the Occurrences that happen'd before his Eyes, in the extraordinary Process which he has undergone, is unable to shew the Falsity of what is quoted from these Depositions.]

He has, therefore, no other Refuge, but the Assurance he carries within him ; that he never either spoke or acted as they say appears from these Depositions ; and the Hopes that the Case will be different with respect to his Judges, who, by reading the Whole of the Depositions, will, no doubt, be undeceived as to the false Suggestions in la Cadiere's Memorial.

It is true, that in Page 61 of the same Memorial, la Cadiere has taken Care to insinuate, That the Proceedings were communicated to Father Girard, and the Jesuits ; and they seem thereby willing to persuade the World, That if, in answering that Memorial, we don't take the same Liberty to quote the Contents thereof, it is not because we can't do it, but that, if we appear reserved in that Respect, it is only because we can't contest the Veracity of these Depositions. To this we shall only answer then; That since they have the Proceedings in their Power, we challenge them to publish them entirely, that the World may judge impartially, which of the two is guilty, Father Girard, or la Cadere.

[Neither shall we take Notice of the different Subterfuges that have been used * to elude Judgment's being given upon the main Point, nor of the extraordinary Methods to which they have had Recourse to that End; but shall content ourselves with only justifying Father Girard from the Crimes they have imputed to him, which are, Sorcery, Quietism, spiritual Incest, procuring Abortion, and the Subornation of Witnesses.

Altho' we have a Right to maintain that Father Girard ought only to answer the Attorney-General, because la Cadere has ceased to be a Party ever since his Majesty, by the De-* Amongst other Methods to defer passing Sentence, Father Nicholas the Carmelite, and Father Cadere the Dominican, were not afraid of telling an enormous Lye in the Face of the Court, by giving Notice on the 21st, and 22d of May last, of an Evocatory Schedule on a Pterence, known by themselves to be false, of a chimerical Consanguinity, between Father Girard and several Members of the Parliament.

Decree of Council of the 16th of January last, refer'd the Cognizance of the Affair to the Parliament, and order'd, that it should be prosecuted at the Suit of the Attorney-General ; and besides, because la Cadere being summon'd to appear in Person, and thereby involv'd in the Accusation, cannot assume the Title of an Accuser ; nevertheless, as an Objection to the Legality of an Evidence is not a Ground of Justification ; and besides, as it is fit to undeceive the Publick as to the false Impressions which la Cadere's Memorial may have made upon their Minds, it was thought proper to refute the different Heads of the Accusation form'd against Father Girard, in the Order above-mentioned.]

Of the SORCERY and ENCHANTMENT.

AS the Charge of Sorcery is the principal Article of the Accusation, as it is the Basis, if we may so speak, of all the Crimes imputed to Father Girard, and that it was only thro' this diabolical Means (as la Cadere pretends) that he became incestuous, it seems necessary to endeavour chiefly to destroy this Charge ; since, if Father Girard is not a Sorcerer, it follows, necessarily, that he is not incestuous.

If these two Crimes had not been so firmly link'd together, as they have, by la Cadere, we own freely, that we should not have thought it worth losing our Time in refuting such an Accusation. But since, on one Hand, we are assured, that it was only by Delusion and Enchantments that Father Girard obtain'd the Satisfaction of his Desires; and since, on the other Hand, we are threaten'd with being tax'd with a senseless Incredulity, if we seem, in the least, to doubt of the Existence of Magick, we find ourselves oblig'd, as it were, in spite of ourselves, to enter into an Examination from which we should have been glad to have been excused.

Let us enquire then, as briefly as possible, whether Father Girard is really a Sorcerer, and whether the Proofs they bring can have any Foundation.

La Cadiere, say they, has had Visions, Revelations, and Trances; she has been lifted up into the Air, tormented by the Devil, and has work'd Miracles; she has been seen to have Stigmata in her Feet and Sides, as well as the Print of a Crown of Thorns upon her Head. These Visions, Trances, &c. continue they, began soon after her Confessor's breathing upon her a magical Vapour, and her Torments, after his persuading her to accept being possessed by the Devil. In this extraordinary Condition did she continue as long as she was under the Direction of Father Girard; nor was she delivered from this State, 'till she was put under that of Father Nicholas, Prior of the discalceated Carmelites, 'till she had made him a general Confession, and had been exorcis'd. They farther add, That several more of Father Girard's Penitents have been in the same State of

Possession ; and in order to prove the Reality of all these Facts, they cite some Depositions taken from the Proceedings. After which, they conclude, by the Help of some Authorities, which they don't understand ; That since these Operations cannot be the miraculous Effects of divine Power, they must necessarily be the Work of the Devil.

Now if, after agreeing with the Author of the Memorial, that all these Effects do not proceed from God, we prove, after an incontestable Manner, that 'tis equally impossible they should be the Operations of the Devil, he must, in his Turn, be forced to own a third Cause, to which he will, himself, be obliged to ascribe them.

'Tis agreed, that these surprizing Incidents do not proceed from God ; for, otherwise, what Room would there be for Complaint ? Where would be the Sorcery, and consequently the Crime of Father Girard ? They must therefore come from the Devil, whom the Director breathed into his Penitent ; this is the Inference which they draw.

In order utterly to destroy this ridiculous Story at one Stroke, if we may use that Expression, we need only, in our Opinion, have Recourse to some obvious and natural Reflections, which we intreat our Judges attentively to consider.

First Reflexion. It is apparent by the Proceedings, that la Cadiere has had Visions before she knew Father Girard, since he was shewn, and nam'd to her, long before he went to Toulon, and as soon as she saw him, an inward Voice told her distinctly, That is the Man that I have appointed to guide you to me. Now we ask la Cadiere, if these Visions proceeded from God or the Devil? If they came from God, to whom did God conduct her? to a Magician, and a lewd profligate; What horrible Blasphemy is that! If they came from the Devil, la Cadiere must have an Intercourse with the Father of Lies, before she knew Father Girard, or had ever spoken to him.

Second Reflexion. It is equally proved by the Proceedings, that la Cadiere had natural Sores in her Feet and Sides, whereof she could never get cured by all the Remedies which she took care to apply, and which she had since the Cunning to make pass for Stigmata.

Father Girard therefore ought not to be look'd upon as the Author of these first Visions, nor of la Cadiere's pretended Stigmata. Now, if she has had Visions and Stigmata independent of Father Girard's magical Breath; what Judgment would any unprejudiced Person make of her subsequent Visions, Raptures, and Trances, &c. which they say have been the Consequences, and infallible Effects of this pretended Breathing?

Third Reflexion. What was the End of la Cadiere's Visions, Revelations; &c. and to what did they tend? She must be forced to answer us herself, since her own Letters, and Memorials,

Memorials, produced by Father Girard in the Course of the Proceedings, contain her Thoughts upon this Head without any Equivocation; viz. That they directed her to the Practice of Virtue, to give good Advice to her Neighbours, to suffer herself, in order to redeem Sinners, to be crucify'd for them, and to deliver by her Prayers a Vessel that was upon the Point of being shipwreck'd.

Now is it possible that any one should maintain these to be the Works of the Devil? Nevertheless they do maintain it; and they pretend even to be Christians who dare to assert this strange, not to say, impious Paradox. Alas! How long has the Enemy of Mankind inspired so much Zeal for the Salvation of Souls? How long has he inflam'd Hearts with the most fervent Charity?

Fourth Reflexion. It is proved by the Letters of la Cadiere to Father Girard, That he being stagger'd by the Recital of the Incidents which she said had happen'd to her, demands new Assurances, and more decisive Proofs, before he would believe them. Now if Father Girard had been the first Cause, and envenomed Source of these Incidents, could he have entertain'd the least Doubt of them? And is it not natural to think that he must have an exact and perfect Knowledge thereof? What! Can the Author of so many Miracles and Prodigies suspend his Judgment, and require more convincing Evidence before he will give Credit to them? This is what is not easily to be comprehended.

These Reflexions alone might be sufficient to overthrow the chimerical System of Magick which they have labour'd so much to fix upon Father Girard. Nevertheless, as it is to be feared, they would take Advantage of our Silence, if we should stop here, let us proceed to demonstrate that the Devil is not the Author of the extraordinary Passages which happen'd to la Cadiere; to which End we will run them over as succinctly as possible.

La Cadiere says first, That Father Girard breath'd upon her, and that, in consequence of this Breathing, she had Visions, and all the extraordinary Incidents which she relates. But what Proof is there of this Breathing, which has been so productive of Prodigies? Where is the Evidence of its necessary Connexion with the surprizing Effects which they pretend it wrought? On such a heavy Accusation as this, which is brought against Father Girard, they ought to begin, one would think, by making it appear that he is a Sorcerer and Magician; and then proving that he exercis'd his Enchantments upon his Penitent. But as long as they confine themselves only to demonstrate, that the Incidents which befel la Cadiere, must necessarily proceed from the Operations of the Devil, we shall always have a Right to conclude against the Author of the Memorial, that he has proved, if they they please, that la Cadiere has been the Victim of an evil Spirit, but by no means, that Father Girard is a Magician, and a Sorcerer. For, once more, where is the Proof of this pretended Breathing wherewith he fascinated his Penitent? Where is the Evidence of the specifick Virtue of this Breathing? In what nocturnal Assemblies has he been surprized? What Sorcerers has he been seen to frequent? In fine, what Compact has he made with the Devil, and what were the Conditions? La Cadiere informs us in her Deposition; He has made this Compact about forty Years; that is to say, when he was about ten Years old, and the Conditions were these; The Devil promis'd Father Girard the Gift of Persuasion, and the Art of winning Hearts in the Pulpit, which is the Chair of Truth, provided that, for his Part, he would be exact and faithful in delivering up to him the Souls, which he shall gain by the Force of Truth, join'd to his Eloquence. 'Tis true, indeed, the Nurses of our Fore-fathers used to lull them to Sleep with such Tales as these; but their Successors, whose Minds are better form'd, and have had better Notions instill'd early into them, require something more solid to satisfy their Enquiries, being little moved with such frivolous Amusements.

In effect, what new Course does the Devil take here? He consents that the Creatures, whom he designs for his Prey, shall first be the Servants of God, practice all manner of Christian Virtues, such as Mortification, Penance, nance, and avoiding Temptation, in a Word, that they shall gain the most signal Victories over him, provided they throw themselves at last into his Arms. What can be more shamefully ridiculous.

But, say they, Angels of Darkneſs have frequently transform'd themſelves into Angels of Light, in order to ſurprize Mankind, and gain their Ends more ſecurely. 'Tis true, we have had the Miſfortune to ſee an Angel of Light, a virtuous Man, a zealous Director, and a Preacher trampling Vice under Foot, where la Cadieſe's Advocate can perceive nothing but a Devil, and an Angel of Darkneſs.

La Cadieſe ſays ſecondly, That Father Girard perſuaded her to ſubmit to be in a State of Poſſeſſion, on Pretence of delivering a Soul from a State of mortal Sin, and that after having ſubmitted to be in this State, ſhe was tormented by the Devil.

It was not Father Girard who adviſed la Cadieſe to ſubmit to this State of Poſſeſſion; on the contrary, 'twas la Cadieſe who preſs'd her Confefſor earneſtly to allow her to conſent to it; which he oppoſed, not thinking her to have Reſolution enough to go thro' ſuch a fiery Tryal. But if it were true (which certainly it is not) that Father Girard had perſuaded her to undergo it, what could they thence infer againſt him? At moſt they could only ſay; That he was an imprudent and indiſcreet Man, to adviſe a young Perſon to embrace a State ſo difficult to be ſupported; but not, That he

he was a Sorcerer and a Magician; since, upon this Supposition, he would have labour'd to destroy the Empire of the Devil, by persuading la Cadriere to undergo the most exquisite Torments, to satisfy the divine Justice for a Soul, that was in a State of mortal Sin.

Thirdly, she says, That she has been lifted up into the Air, and that this has happen'd to her several times.

But we positively affirm, that no-body ever saw any such thing befall her; in vain does she assert, That she felt herself forced off her Seat, and raised up in a Chaise upon a Journey; we shall believe it never the sooner for that. What is there extraordinary in touching the Roof of such kind of Carriages with one's Head? Does not this pretended Miracle often happen, even to Persons who don't desire to make the Experiment, and that without the Devil's intervening?

Fourthly, She had Stigmata in her Feet and Side, as well as the Marks of a Crown of Thorns upon her Head, from whence the Blood would frequently trickle down her Face.

If it is true, as has been said, and as must appear from the Proceedings, that these pretended Stigmata were nothing else but natural Sores, with which she was afflicted, this Proof of the Operation of the Devil falls to the Ground of itself.

And, as to the Marks of the Crown of Thorns, and the Blood that was seen upon her Face, we beg our Judges to consider that these pretended pretended Miracles never failed of being foretold, and that they happended periodically at the End of each Month, when it was not difficult for la Cadiere to set herself in order, so as to surprize innocent People, who were not sufficiently upon their Guard.

But, continue they, if these Sores had been natural, as is pretended, would they have been healed immediately by the Exorcism of Father Nicholas, so as that nothing remained afterwards to be seen but the Scars ?

'Tis from these very Scars, which la Cadiere's Advocate brings as a Proof, that the Sores were not natural, and that they were healed by the Exorcism, that we conclude the contrary: For if these Sores had been the Work of Satan, and had not proceeded from some Disease to which Mankind are subject, the Exorcism, which is the only Remedy for Disorders of this Nature, ought not only to have cured her, but even to have effaced the most minute * Traces of them, unless 'tis to be thought that Father Nicholas's Exorcism had not Virtue enough wholly to dispel the Charm.

Fifthly they affirm, That la Cadiere discovered the Secrets of Men's Hearts, and had a perfect Knowledge of their inmost Thoughts. Suppose this should be granted for a Moment, altho' the excessive Prepossession of those who looked upon her as a Saint and a Prophetess, might probably lead them into this Error,

with

with what Rashness will they dare to conclude from this Concession, That this is an Effect of Sorcery and Magick? Do not they know, or at least ought they not to know, that the Secrets of Consciences are reserved by God to himself alone, and that he alone is the Searcher of Hearts? Besides, as we have already said, does the Devil correct Sin? Does he inspire Virtue? Does he bring back Sinners into the Way of Salvation? But these were the Lessons which la Cadriere read to those Persons, the Secrets of whose Consciences she is said to have discovered.

Sixthly 'tis said, That Father Girard believed the Transportation of Bodies; because the Lady de Lescot, according to la Cadriere's Memorial, Page 40 and 41, testifys, that she had heard the Lady Beauffier say, that Father Girard had assured her thereof; which struck her so, that she fell sick two Days afterwards.

But we affirm boldly, that Father Girard never said, or thought of saying, any such Thing to Sister Beauffier; we even defy la Cadriere's Advocate to find in all the Proceedings, which he no doubt has turned over and over for this Purpose, that Sister Beauffier has in any Part thereof owned what they have here made her say. From hence one may conclude, that Father Girard not only never spoke after that Manner, but also, that such Evidence as the Lady de Lescot's, deserves to have no Credit given to it, upon any other Heads which it may contain.

Lastly

Lastly they will have it, that la Cadiere has spoken Latin, a Language to which she was utterly a Stranger ; and that she had such Distortions, and made such frightful Faces, as scared all the Company ; they add, that several more of Father Girard's Penitents have likewise been in the same State of Possession.

If speaking a few Latin Words, which most Books of Devotion explain in French, were a sufficient Sign of being possessed with the Devil ; if it were sufficient to have Convulsions, and a Stiffness in their Limbs, how many Persons might pass for Sorcerers, at an easy Rate ?

But in order to expose more fully the Ridiculousness of this Proof of Sorcery, let us take the Pains to recollect for a Moment the Circumstances of the particular Facts which we have just cited.

We intend to speak of the Publick Scene which la Cadiere acted at Toulon, on the 16th and 17th of last Novem. after her Return from the Country. One would be apt to think that the Devil, who had left her about six Weeks, had only done it with Design to resume his Power over her in the City, where he might have a greater Number of Witnesses of his Legerdemain. Accordingly, no sooner is she at Cuffs with the evil Spirit, but immediately Father Nicholas flies thither, and, like an active and prudent General, is at Hand every where, he bauls, he fatigues himself, he calls the Devil to an Account, he talks Latin to him, the Devil answers ; he alters his Expression, the Devil is struck Dumb ; but Father Nicholas is not. He interprets his Silence, he makes Reflexions thereupon, he suggests as he pleases, and both with his Gestures and Voice assists the young Priest Cadiere, who being yet a Novice, and in a panick Fear, exorcises, altho' he is suspended. In fine, after several of la Cadiere's Distorsions and Grimaces, which so plainly proved the Operation of the Devil, after the Priests of the Cathedral, who were sent for to that End, would not exorcise her ; after the Surgeons had advised Cupping-Glasses, and some sensible Citizens a Bull's-Pizzle ; the Devil took his Flight, returned no more, neither has he thought fit to make his Appearance ever since.

It must be owned, this Devil was of a very singular Kind ; others will hardly give Way to Prayer, Fasting, Mortification, and the lawful Authority of the Church ; but this is such a Novice, such a simple, or rather such a good-natur'd Devil, that he flies for ever at the very first Command, even of those who have no Authority to command him.

Such was the End of la Cadiere's Devil ; he was engender'd, brought up and maintain'd by Father Girard's Breathing ; and Father Nicholas, the discalceated Carmelite, by a Virtue peculiar to him, since he was suspended, and had no lawful Authority, tramples him under Foot, and destroys him past Recovery. A Victory so much the more certain, as it was follow'd by an equal Advantage gain'd over the Devils of l'Allemande, and la Battarelle; and if his Zeal did not extend to all the rest of Father Girard's Penitents, who he affirm'd, had equally Need of his Assistance, as is prov'd by the Proceedings, 'twas because they had not generous Docility to confess themselves possess'd by the Devil.

But is not this detaining our Readers too long upon a Subject which we have promis'd to abridge; wherefore let us conclude, and say in two Words, That since the Devil cannot be deem'd the Author of the extraordinary Incidents which beset la Cadiere, we must necessarily ascribe them to more simple and natural Causes. Now, what can these Causes be? The World without doubt begins already to have some Suspicion of them, and we are persuaded, that no body can be mistaken therein.

In effect, the Devil abhors the Cross; but that of la Cadiere makes one descend from Heaven, and procures it to be brought to her even by Angels, his most cruel Enemies. The Devil taints the Principles of all our Actions, and perverts our Consciences; but this searches them in order to purify them, and deliver them from Sin. The Devil by his Temptations wiles and prompts us to Evil, and draws us in to commit it; this, by wise and salutary Counsels, incites us to Virtue, and makes us embrace it. What new kind of Devil then, unheard of 'till our Days, is this of la Cadriere? But if they will absolutely insist that there was Sorcery and Magick in the present Case, let us accuse la Cadriere alone thereof; since she had the Address to fascinate the Eyes, and impose upon the Understanding, of Father Girard, to that Degree, that he never discover'd her Impostures and Malice 'till it was too late.

Of the QUIETISM.

FATHER Girard is not only a Sorcerer, but he is likewise a Quietist. It seems at first ridiculous to bring the second Accusation, after having brought the other. For, can one reasonably ascribe the Opinions of any particular Heresy to an impious Wretch, who must have renounced his God, and his Religion, to make a Compact with the Devil? Would a Man of this Character follow one Sort of Error rather than another? Or would he endeavour to insinuate it? One might as well accuse him of being an Arrian, a Monothelite, Pelagian, &c. as of being a Quietist. He would be all these, or rather he would be none of them, since he would believe nothing. Besides, is not the Black Art sufficient to effect all the detestable Designs which a Sorcerer can propose to himself? Or does he think to accomplish his Ends by the Way of Persuasion? Does he pretend to make Exhortations to those Persons whom he intends tends to seduce? No, Fascination and Enchantment are his universal Remedy; and he gives himself up to the Devil, only in order to succeed more speedily, and more effectually.

But la Cadere, and her Accomplices, had their Views herein. They well knew that they could not blacken Father Girard, and that they should make but a slight Impression upon most Persons, by the single Charge of Sorcery; wherefore, they have artfully join'd Heresy to Impiety, with Design to infer his Guilt equally from both; to the End, that if the Publick should not be weak enough to be imposed on by the chimerical Accusation of Magick, they might, at least, give in to the more natural, and more plausible Charge of Quietism.

Now this Heresy is of two Sorts; the one is a Quietism purely spiritual, and the other entirely sensual. We shall take Care not to explain distinctly in what the one and the other consists. None but a Pen that is used to be defiled with dipping into the most shameful Obscenity, dare enter into a particular Detail of Errors which ought to be conceal'd from all the World; wherefore, we shall satisfy ourselves with proceeding to the Matter of Fact. They here charge Father Girard with being guilty of the first Quietism, and thereby lay the Foundation of the second, which is imputed to him in the following Article.

But upon what Grounds is such a heavy Charge founded against a Regular Priest? If Providence sent any Souls to Father Girard to guide them to Virtue, the Custom of his Direction has always been to excite them to Prayer, Mortification, Humility, Obedience, the Exercise of good Works, and the renouncing of their own Inclinations, in order to follow the Will of God only, and unite themselves more closely to him, by recollecting themselves, and setting their Hearts upon him. This, we suppose, must appear from the Proceedings, where his Penitents have' been summon'd to give Evidence upon the Facts falsely imputed to him.

But, say they, Page 79, and 80, of the Case; Quietism is an Error, which, under Pretence of an immediate and intimate Union with God, reduces the highest Perfection of the Soul to a passive and lifeless Contemplation; looks upon the Exercise of Christian Virtues, and vocal Prayer, not only as useless, but even as Imperfections and Obstacles to the Divine Operation. Now Father Girard (add they, Page 81, 82,) is convicted of having instill'd these pernicious Maxims into his Penitents: First, by the Depositions of [Messires Giraud and Gandalbert Ministers of the Cathedral; of the Lady Marianne Aubert; Anne Battarelle, and Theresia Lionne, Widow to l'Allemande,] and afterwards, Page 84, by his own Letter to la Cadriere, of July 22, where they find these Expressions: Forget yourself, and be passive; these

two Words comprehend the most sublime Disposition; Expressions which contain the very Quintessence and Encomium of Qui- etism.

As to these Depositions, that of Messire Giraud is founded only upon some Conversation which, he says, he had with la Reboul, and la Laugier, wherein he takes it for granted, that these two young Women being examin'd about their State, acknowledged sincerely, That they had not for a long time used any vocal Prayer; that they never said the Office of the Virgin Mary, nor their Beads; and that they never read the Gospel. In the mean while, both the one and the other of these have been interrogated; and 'tis to be presumed, that their Depositions fully justify the contrary; since la Cadieere, who seems so well versed in the Proceedings, does not quote the Tenour of them, at the same Time that she is very careful to cite that of Messire Giraud, which is of no Force any farther than as it is conformable to theirs.

'Tis of the utmost Importance to observe here, what Father Girard remark'd upon the reading the Deposition of this Minister, viz. That knowing he was to give Evidence, he previously went in Quest of Proofs of this pretended Quietism, wherewith to compose his Deposition; and that, to this End, he artfully examined four of Father Girard's Penitents, la Laugier, la Reboul, la Gravier, and l'Allemande. Now, where would be the Wonder, if such simple ignorant ignorant Souls, being put, as one may say, upon the Rack, by an ingenious Man, who puzzles them with a Chain of ambiguous and captious Propositions, should make some Mistakes in answering innocently upon a Subject infinitely delicate, where very learned, and very pious Divines have stumbled. But, is it not yet more surprizing, that they should have dared to make Father Girard responsible for what they have said, and lay down as his Sentiments, and the Principles of his Direction to his Penitents, what a Logician may have extorted from these Women by the Force of his Arguments?

Neither ought one any more to draw any Inference from what [la Cadere says, page 83. of her Case] was depos'd by Messire Gandalbert, the other Minister of the Cathedral, on his being confronted with the Abbe Cadere, where he declares, That the Widow l' Allemande had confess'd to him, that when she was under Father Girard's Direction, she not only never used any vocal Prayer, but was even utterly unable to pray. For, altho' they quote Part of her Deposition, which says, *That finding it impossible for her to pray, and having inform'd Father Girard of her Condition, he told her, that she must keep herself united with God, for that one * Look from him might, by his Grace, put an End to all our Dryness and Barrenness.* Nevertheless we are assured that this Woman

* It is a Glance of an Eye towards him, in Mr. Roberts's, which is a gross Mistake.

Woman cannot have depos'd as they have made her, since she says in this very Deposition, as Father Girard heard, when they were confronted together, That he had always exhorted her to do her utmost to overcome the Difficulties she met with in praying.

The Deposition of the Lady Aubert, Superior of the Monastery of St. Clare at Ollioules, who says, that la Cadiere could not perform the Exercises of the Society; that she was never seen at Prayers in Church; and that she never practised any Mortification, is made void by herself. For, first she attributes all the Passages that happened in the Monastery to Sorcery and Magick: What Weakness! Secondly, she says, that she never saw la Cadiere at Prayers in the Church, which made her suspect that she was not arrived at such a high Degree of Perfection: What Reasoning! Ought she not to have said, that this made her conclude, without Hesitation, that la Cadiere had no Religion and was only a Hypocrite? Thirdly, did not she write to Father Girard, June 29, That la Cadiere was under great Afflictions, but nevertheless she never omitted any of the Exercises of the Society, and that this was the Effect of the Graces wherewith the Lord favoured her. What a Contradiction is this to her Depositions? Fourthly, how could the Lady Aubert see a Candidate, as la Cadiere was, neither use any Prayer, nor Act of Mortification, without being alarmed about her Vocation, and without apprizing her Confessor and her Relations lations thereof ; nevertheless she never did. What Negligence ! Fifthly, How comes she to be the only one of that numerous Society, who perceived these Facts ? How could it happen, that not one of the Nuns in the same Monastery, and especially the Mistress of the Novices, who in this Point has a particular kind of Direction, ever took notice thereof ? Sixthly, How comes it, on the contrary, that the Mistress of the Novices, in the Memoirs which she sent to Father Girard, and which are inserted in the Proceedings, represents la Cadiere (who according to the Superior's Account never pray'd) as another Seraphim, who by her Raptures, the Fervency of her Prayer, and the Ejaculations which she utter'd even with a loud Voice, ravished and inflamed the whole Society. For, had it been otherwise, would the Superior have allowed, and continued to allow, her the Liberty of receiving the Communion every Day ? Would the whole Convent of St. Clare have expressed so much Earnestness to retain her, and so much Fear of losing her ? This Earnestness, and this Fear, is very evident in the Memoirs above-mentioned.

The last Deposition, which is that of la Batarelle, cannot be thought a Proof in any Degree ; she being a young Woman who has made herself notorious by her Extravagances at la Cadiere's Farm, where she pretended to be Possessed, or at least she believed herself to be so ; and to have been delivered from the Devil by the Exorcisms of Father Nicholas.

Father Girard had long been sensible of her Character, and of the Weakness of her Brain.

As for the rest, it is fact, notwithstanding all she has advanced in her Deposition, that she has been seen praying in many Places, and especially in the Chapel of the Third Order of the Carmelites, where she chanted the Litanies and Hymns, and sung regularly the Vespers of the Virgin Mary, with an audible Voice. And besides, she owns even in her Deposition, which was read to Father Girard, that he always advised her to use vocal Prayer, and to exercise good Works.

As to Father Girard's Letter of July 22, it is far from containing the Errors of the Quietists. God be prais'd (says he in this Letter) I render a thousand Thanks to our Lord for the Continuation of his Mercies. But the Quietist returns no Thanks to God, he performs no Acts of Devotion; that would be disturbing his Rest: Being intellectually united to God, he no longer acts, but is absolutely passive: I have need of Assurance, adds he, but you shall not fall a Sacrifice thereunto. This Expression is in Answer to the Letter which he had received from la Cadiere that very Day, wherein she informed him, That God shewed her by the Pains she suffered, that he had not call'd her to that Monastery, and that in order to manifest his Will, he would yet add to her Sufferings: Hereupon, the prudent Director mistrusts this Account, and suspects it to be the Effect of his Penitent's Levity, wherefore he demands demands farther Assurance. Now, a Quietist never troubles himself about any thing, he never departs from his Indifference; but without thinking either of what is past, present, or to come, is undisturb'd at all Events. I will recommend you (continues Father Girard in the same Letter) to our good God; do not you, for your Part, forget my Patient, my Sister, and the others whom I have recommended to you. Does a Quietist order the saying Prayers for others? he does not even pray for himself, he is not at all concern'd about the Care of his own Salvation, much less about that of others; that would be to be still attach'd to worldly Concerns, and all Things are become alike to him. On the contrary, Father Girard, in this Letter, recommends himself to the Prayers of his Penitent, as well as his Patients, and all other Persons for whom he had any Respect. Begin always (says he in the same Place) these Days of Abstinence with forbearing Meat. This wholesome Counsel is in Answer to la Cadiere's telling him, That her Constitution positively would not allow her to abstain from Flesh, and that the Aversion she had to it, proceeded certainly from the Divine Permission, which shewed her thereby, that she was not called to this Monastery, where it was the Rule to eat no Meat all the Year. But can such an Order as this, given by Father Girard, come out of the Mouth of a Quietist? Does the Quietist recommend Mortifications? Does he even own the Commandments? Not at all ; he believes himself freed from the Yoke of the Law, and he is, in his Opinion, authorized to use all his Liberty ; to him all Things are good : We shall discover the holy Will of our Master, continues the Letter. Do we ever find any such Care in a Quietist ? Does he think of consulting God ? Does he apply himself either to know, to enquire after, or to execute his Intentions ? No, without doubt ; because that would be doing Acts of Reflection, which he is forbidden, and which are even impossible to him, if he is arrived at the Perfection of his State.

But la Cadiere, and her Brothers, undoubtedly will answer, That it is not in these Expressions that the heretical Venom lies ; 'tis in these Words which we have cited from the same Letter ; Forget yourself, and be passive. But what ! can this Letter instil Quietism in one Part, and destroy it in the other ? Is that possible ? Don't they know, on one Hand, that a Quietist cannot disguise his Sentiments, especially in a private Letter ? And are they ignorant, on the other, that his Principles are coherent, and that he must necessarily talk a Language that is uniform.

But how can they put a malicious Construction upon an Expression, which signifies no more than a Sacrifice of our own Will, in order to cleave fast to the sovereign Will of God, and to obey it as soon as it is known to us ? Is it not in this Sense that it is said in the Imitation of Jesus Christ, a Book altogether ther divine, Book 7. Chap. 37. My Son, deny yourself entirely, and I will be entirely yours. How often, and in how many Things must I deny myself? At all Times, and in all Things; for I will see you stripp'd of all. — I say to you again; deny yourself entirely, deliver yourself up into my Hands; give All for All. — Let the sole End of your Desires, of your Prayers, and of your Labours, be to divest yourself of all Property, &c. Expressions which may be equally found in all Books of solid Piety.

La Cadiere, in her Letters of July 21, and 22, expresses some Doubts concerning her Vocation; with uneasy Reflections on what passes about her; Difficulties about her Diet; a continual and particular Repetition of what she suffers, and yet greater Fears of what she may have to suffer afterwards. Thereupon Father Girard answers, Forget yourself. Forbear all Reflections about yourself; don't consider yourself; resign yourself; renounce yourself; if possible, lose Sight of yourself: Leave God to operate; that is to say, Don't stop him; don't resist him; keep yourself in a Dependence upon his Grace, and a Submission to his Spirit; receive kindly what he does, what he wills, what he gives; refuse him nothing, but follow in all Things his good Pleasure, as soon as it is manifested to you by his Light. Is it not in this Manner that all our spiritual Fathers speak? And is inspiring such Sentiments instilling Error into the Mind of a Penitent?

But in what Sense did la Cadriere's Brother's themselves understand this Expression of Father Girard? Did they imagine it to contain the Errors of Quietism, when they made her say, in the Letter which they composed for her, in Answer to that of July 22. I bless the Lord for your great Courage in exhorting me to Perseverance; be assured that I will perform your Orders exactly. Is not that saying, That she would forget herself to comply with the Will of God; that she would strive to abstain from Flesh; that she would again put her Vocation to the Test, and neglect none of the Advice which had been given her? With what Face then can they now put an ill Construction upon an Expression of which they at that Time approved, and which they looked upon, as containing very wholesome Counsel? The Letter has not changed its Nature, neither can it have any other Meaning now, than it had formerly.

To all these Proofs of the Purity of Father Girard's Doctrine, let us add a few more Reflexions. He has preach'd, directed, and heard Confessions for these twenty-five Years; has any one before ever made any Objections to his Doctrine? He has spoken from the Pulpit, and the Confessionary to several Thousands during many Years in the City of Aix alone; if amongst such Numbers there is one single Person who ever heard him utter one single suspicious Sentence, let him declare it aloud and confound him.

But,

But, on the contrary, of all the Persons who have disclosed the Secrets of their Hearts and Consciences to him, is there any one who has not been edified by his Discourses ; any one who has not been affected with his Rémonstrances ; or any one who has not exercised good Works, Fastings, Mortifications, and all other Christian Virtues ? Such is the Assurance which results from the Testimonies of a good Conscience, that Father Girard is not afraid here to Appeal even to la Cadiere's Advocate as a Witness ; and he challenges him to declare before God, whether, during the Time that he was under his Direction, he ever perceiv'd any thing in his Discourse that was contrary to the Holiness of his Profession, a Submission to all the Decisions of the Church, the Purity of the soundest Morals, and the Observance of the sacred Laws of the Gospel. What then ! did this Father stay till he went to Toulon, and was fifty Years old, before he embraced Quietism, and set up for a Teacher * of Fanaticism and Licentiousness ? No, no, they whose Inclinations take such a fatal Byas, begin their Course much earlier, and don't wait 'till that Season, when the Passions begin to lose their Force, and subside.

It is therefore resolving to destroy the Truth, and substitute vain Phantoms in its stead, to found such a heinous Accusation upon the mistaken Depositions of two or three

* Mr. Robert's Translator p. 25 renders, dogmatiser en fanatique & en libertin, to turn Fanatick and Libertine.

illy Women, who being full of extravagant Notions, have rather been guided by their Fancy and Imagination than the Truth, to which alone they ought to conform their Evidence. Besides, is not the World over-run with such Devotees, who either having overburthen'd themselves, by their own Choice, with vocal Prayers, till they are ready to sink under the Fatigue, hurry them over afterwards precipitately, and believe they have wholly done their Duty, when they have gone thro' them, whether well or ill ; or else, who finding in themselves a Reluctance to perform their spiritual Exercises, immediatly cry out to their Confessor, That they are lazy, that they can't pray, and that they are abandoned by God? Now, if Father Girard has advised the former to omit certain Prayers, which were merely Works of Supererogation, in order to bestow some Time upon more necessary Duties, such as learning to know themselves, purifying their Hearts, disengaging them from the World, and from themselves, in order to advance in the Love of God, has he therein done any thing more than follow'd a constant Maxim, and Rule of Direction prescribed by all spiritual Fathers ? And whatever the Author of the State of the Case, who understands nothing of these Affairs, may say, is not this Advice as far from all Appearance of Quietism, as Light from Darknesh?

As to the Devotees of the second Sort, if some of Father Girard's Penitents have found, at certain Times more Difficulty than ordinary in attending to Prayer (as God does not always communicate himself alike, but uses to try even the most devout Souls) can any one with Justice, or even with the Shadow of Probability impute the Fault to him? And especially if he recollects, (what appears plainly from the Proceedings) that he has always used his utmost Endeavours to combat the Repugnance of these Persons to that Exercise, and has particularly recommended the Practice thereof to them.

Let us conclude therefore, that as the Charge of Sorcery is an Extravagance, which they have not been able to impose upon Mankind; so that of Quietism is only a palpable Falshood, and a gross Calumny; since it is contradicted by the Writings, the Discourses, and in short the whole Conduct of the Accused; and besides 'tis proved false even by the Depositions of the Witnesses produced against him.

Of the SPIRITUAL INCEST, and procuring ABORTION.

IF Father Girard had been accused only of Sorcery; if the odious Imputations, wherewith they have endeavour'd to blacken him, had tended only to make him pass for an absolute Master of the Black-Art; we may venture to say, That how great soever this Crime may be in itself, there would have been no need of justifying him, either to his Judges, or to the Publick;

Publick; and that for this Reason only, that People are not mightily disposed to think a Man's Breath capable of working so many Miracles.

It was not therefore sufficient, for those who had formed the Design of ruining Father Girard, to assert, That he was a Sorcerer, at the Hazard of not being believed by any one; it was necessary to subjoin thereto such Crimes as should proceed more from human Weakness, than the Wiles of the Devil, because they were Men whom they design'd to persuade. Hereby they gain'd two Points of the greatest Importance; first, They gave a plausible Reason for Father Girard's Sorcery; for no body makes a Compact with the Devil for nothing, or only to play Tricks, from whence he can reap no Advantage: And, secondly, They at the same time saved la Cadiere's Honour, she being to maintain boldly, as accordingly she does, that she has always preserv'd her Heart and her Mind very chaste, even in the midst of the greatest Liberties, which she accuses her Confessor of taking.

Let us see however, if notwithstanding the Advantage which la Cadiere may derive from the Corruption of human Nature, she will be more successful in proving the Crimes of Incest, and procuring Abortion, then she has been in convicting us of Sorcery. In her State of the Case, the first Proof of so heinous an Accusation is founded upon the Morals of the Jesuits in general, which allow, as they say, all

all sorts of Sins of Uncleanness. But they who are acquainted with the Jesuits, will dispense with our refuting this Proof; and as for those who do not know them, they will be willing; if they are equitable, to have some little Knowledge of them, before they believe the Author of the Memorial; and then we flatter our selves that they will soon be incens'd at such an impudent Calumny: Wherefore let us take no more Notice thereof, but proceed to the other Proofs which he brings, which may be reduced to four.

First, Father Girard's frequenting his Penitents Company.

Secondly, The Care he took to lock himself up frequently in her Chamber.

Thirdly, The criminal Liberties he took with her.

And, Fourthly, The Letters he wrote to her, where his Passion breaks out in every Line.

We will give a particular Answer to each of these Proofs, or Presumptions; and we hope to do it in such a Manner as to satisfy every impartial Person: But permit us first to demonstrate by some Reflections the Falsity of this Accusation, and at the same time to shew its Impossibility according to the System advanced by la Cadriere's Advocate.

In effect, if there is no Truth in the Charge of Sorcery; if Father Girard's breathing upon her is a mere Chimæra; if he is no Sorcerer, as has been demonstrated, the Consequence that naturally naturally follows from thence is, that he is not Incestuous ; since they have interwoven these Crimes one with the other after such a Manner, that they cannot be separated, and that the Non-existence of the one, necessarily carries with it the Destruction of the other.

For since, according to la Cadriere's Language, she has always preserved herself perfectly pure and innocent, it was impossible to offer the least criminal Idea to her Imagination, but it would have shock'd her immediately ; consequently she would not have failed forsaking a Director, who should have attempted more than once to satisfy his infamous Desires, unless, as she declares, He had taken Advantage of those Moments wherein the entire Privation of her Senses rendered her incapable of knowing the Liberties that were taken with her.

This is la Cadriere's Hypothesis ; this is what she still maintains in her Memorial. Take away the Sorcery, take away the Breathing upon her, take away this Privation of her Senses, restore her to her natural State, it is no longer possible to comprehend how a Person, who talked of nothing but God, who wrote of nothing but God, who was almost always in an Extacy, and Rapture with God, who in her Lent Journal, in all her Letters, appears ready rather to sacrifice herself a thousand Times, than to offend God ; it is not possible to comprehend, I say, how in cool Blood, and enjoying her right Senses, she she could deliver herself up to the Abominations of a Priest ; nay, a Regular Priest, and even her Confessor ; no, that cannot be ; nor could she be dishonoured, but when she was not herself.

Suppose we should grant this for once, what would be the Consequence of such a Supposition ? But that Father Girard must absolutely be a Magician ; or otherwise la Cadiere's System will fall to Ruin, and can no longer be supported.

Now we have proved, as we think, irrefragably, that Father Girard was never guilty of Sorcery ; that his pretended Breathing upon her was Nonsense, and her Possession a Chimæra. Wherefore let us conclude, that this Crime whereof he is accused, is the blackest of all Aspersions. Not only, because this Crime cannot subsist without Sorcery, but also, because la Cadiere having been once convicted of falsely charging Father Girard with so great an Impiety as that of being a Magician, there is no Calumny whereof she may not be capable, nor no Crime whereof she may not accuse him ; and consequently she ought no longer to be believed, or heard, in any Point that regards her Confessor.

But let us for a Moment realize this Phantom of Sorcery, and suppose, that by some very occult Virtue, Father Girard's breathing upon la Cadiere, might possibly deprive her of all Sense and Knowledge. Upon this chimerical merical Supposition, we ask, whether, after this diabolical kind of Trance, she came to herself, and called to Mind what had passed, or whether she could not recollect it? If she did recollect those Passages, could she have continued such an obscene Commerce, and have preserved her Innocence, as she pretends? And if she could not call them to Mind, how was she able to remember them afterwards? Was it by the Means of the Exorcism of Father Nicholas? But it is apparent from her own Account, that before she was exorcised by Father Nicholas, she made him a general Confession of all the Particulars of her deplorable Condition; and consequently it cannot be by the Virtue of the Exorcism that she recollected herself; besides, that an Exorcism cannot make Persons remember what they never knew.

Nevertheless, la Cadieere, in her Declaration to the Grand Vicar of Toulon, (a Declaration stuffed with Infamy) gives a shocking Account of a thousand Circumstances which accompanied Father Girard's Crime. However, she was not herself, as she says, from whence we ought to conclude, that she could not remember them; and that, consequently, the Incest wherewith she charges Father Girard, is no more true than the Sorcery; and that it is but a malicious Invention, and a black Aspersion.

Can we desire a more decisive, or more convincing Proof, then that wherewith la Cadieere

diere herself has supplied us in the Declaration just mentioned, which is published, although she durst not insert it in her Memorial, because of the Absurdities and Contradictions wherewith it abounds? Let us see what she says there of the Crime here in Question. It must be excused if we enter into Particulars, which we would willingly have avoided, and if we are forced to quote some Expressions of this infamous Piece. La Cadriere assures us, That her Confessor ordered her to get upon her Bed, saying, that it was not that Bed which she deserved, but the Scaffold she had seen at Aix, where she had made a Journey not long before; and that, after many Preparatives, he consummated his Passion, which put her to exquisite Pain, having never had a Notion before, how such sort of Things were done.

Now, here is a Period of Time fixed by la Cadriere herself, which destroys all that she advances in this Declaration, or afterwards. In effect, it is proved in the Letter which she sent to Father Girard from Aix, and which is at the End of the Memorial, that she was in that City on May 19, 1730, from whence she returned on the 23d. Now, as she never was at Aix at any other Time, it can only be after her Return from thence on the 23d that Father Girard debauched her first, because that, till then she had never known how such Things were done, Nevertheless, she proceeds to say, in this same Declaration, That after this Action she had Reason to believe that she was

*with Child ; and that Father Girard, who was equally uneasy at such a Suspicion, brought her, for eight Days successively, a reddish Liquor, which in the End made her miscarry. Thus the Falsity of all these Facts discovers itself, as soon as one reflects, that from her Return from Aix, which was on the 23d of May, till the Day that she entered the Monastery of St. Clare at Ollioules, which was on the 6th of June following, there was but an Interval of about ten Days ; wherein there could neither happen any Suspicion of being with Child, nor any Abortion, nor any other of the Facts which she has heaped together to make Father Girard appear Criminal. This Reflection alone, wherewith la Cadiere has supply'd us, without doubt unwillingly, and undesignedly, ought to suffice, one would think, to discover and confound at once the Imposture of the two heinous Crimes whereof she accuses Father Girard.*

Let us however subjoin to all these convincing Proofs, some Reflections which come naturally into the Mind, and which, we are persuaded, all Persons of Sense have not failed already to make. Either Father Girard is an old Libertine, and then how is it to be imagined that he could impose upon the Publick for so many Years, and pass constantly for a Person of an unblameable Reputation and Morals ? His different Employments have obliged him to converse with an infinite Number of People of both Sexes, and of all Ages and Conditions ; have not we a Right to affirm, that he always edified them ? If there had been any Hypocrisy or Debauchery lurking in his Heart, some Marks of it would certainly have broken out upon some Occasion or other ; and in spite of all the Precautions he could use, his Failing could not have escaped those Numbers to whose Eyes his Function kept him continually exposed. Is there any one, nevertheless, who has ever conceived the least Suspicion of him ? And now that he is delivered up, as it were, to publick Infamy, can it be said, that one single Complaint has been made against his pass'd Conduct ?

Ages

He must then be grown, on a sudden, a Profligate and a Libertine, who being blinded by his Passion, gives himself up without Reserve to every thing that can advance his Designs. But if he had a Mind to make a Conquest of la Cadastre, why did not he follow the common Method, which, to our Misfortune, we find succeeds but too well in the World ? Because he was a Sorcerer, replies Father Nicholas, and the Disagreeableness of his Person would infallibly have made him miscarry in that Attempt. Nothing therefore but extraordinary Means could surmount this Obstacle ; accordingly Father Girard's first Step was to breathe upon her brutishly, in order to inspire her with the same Passion which had so violently seized him ; for before this enchanting Breath, Father Girard, as la Cadriere herself owns, had had never mentioned his Love to her, or so much as been at her House.

But what was the Consequence of such an odd and extraordinary Beginning? Why, no doubt, being transported with Love for his new Conquest, he would omit no Means of pleasing her, and giving her the strongest Proofs of his Affection. Not at all, Father Girard is a Sorcerer, he does not love like other Men; wherefore he delivers la Cadiere up to the Devil, who first bangs her soundly, and puts her to the most exquisite Anguish and Torments; this done, by Virtue of his Magick Art, he makes her live forty Days only upon Water; nor is this all, he crucifies her, and afflicts her with the most noisome Sores, capable of disgusting the most passionate Lover: Or rather let us say, capable of extinguishing the lewdest Flame, by the Idea of that awful Mystery which they represented. To confess the Truth, our Posterity will never be able to imagine how such Tales of a Tub could find any Credit in so discerning an Age as ours; and their Surprize would be irrecoverable, were they not to be inform'd, at the same time, how far some Persons in our Days have carried their Prepossessions against the Jesuits.

We should never have done, were we to suffer ourselves to be carried away by all the Reflections which croud in upon us from the Consideration of this fanatical System; it is high time to answer the particular Proofs that are

are brought of this spiritual Incest of Father Girard.

drawn from his frequent Visits.*

With what an odious Comparison is la Cadiere's Advocate pleased to begin his first Proof? He will have the Visits of a Confessor to be of the same Nature with the Assiduities of a Man of the World, who frequents a young Person whom he has no lawful Call to visit, and is soon accused of a Rape, not only by reason of the Fruits of his Crime, but even on Account of these same Assiduities: Who is there that does not immediately see the Difference between the Behaviour of such a one, and that of Father Girard? The first can have no other View but to satisfy an unlawful Passion; whereas, the second is lawfully incited by his Zeal, and the Exercise of Works of Charity; the one is almost always suspicious; but the other ought to be exempted from Suspicion; unless the Malice of Man's Heart will brand Virtue with all the Characteristicks of Vice.

If it were lawful thus to invert Ideas, nothing would be more easy than to form an Accusation against any one. But, had the Author of the State of the Case ever any such Suspicions of Father Girard, when he went regularly, for four Months, to his House, to attend his first Wife in the lingering Sickness whereof she died? Why then does he now find Fault with an Action which then seem'd to him so innocent, and even so generous, only that Prejudice has destroy'd all Notions of Justice and Charity in his Soul.

Indeed, if Visits of this Nature could be condemn'd, what Disorders would it not cause in Families? All Persons who are sick, indisposed, and incapable of stirring out of their Houses, must die without any Help for their Souls; there would be no Confessor who would assist them, for fear of exposing himself to Censure, unless some charitable Person, thro' an uncommon Principle of Virtue, would run the Risque of being ruin'd himself, to save them. Strange Madness! Father Girard is overwhelm'd here with Reproaches and Aspersions, only because he has discharg'd the Duties of his Function zealously, and has exercis'd Works of Charity.

Now, this Father protests, and we don't doubt but it appears from the Proceedings, That he never saw his Penitent but in her Mother's House; that during the first twenty Months that he heard her Confession, he never set Foot within her Door; that he never began to visit her 'till after she was sick; that then he only went at the Desire of her Relations, and that always in open Day, either with a Jesuit in his Company, or the Abbot her Brother, because the Society of Jesuits at Toulon is so small that they cannot always spare a Brother as a Companion. Now we ask any equitable Person, if Visits thus thus circumstanced can be maliciously interpreted?

The Journies Father Girard took to Olioules, during the Space of three Months that la Cadiere staid there, (which they have affected to represent as so frequent, but which we hope the Proceedings, which have more Truth and more Sincerity than their Declamations, will reduce to their just Number) proceeded from the same Motives as those at her Mother's House; that is to say, from Zeal and Charity. To be convinced of this, we need only recollect the Part which la Cadiere acted in the Convent, as, the pretended Miracles she wrought there, her Scruples concerning her Vocation, and extreme Desire of coming out gain, and we shall find that the Presence of a Confessor was absolutely necessary; whether to discharge the Duties of his Office, or to satisfy himself of the State and Miracles of his Penitent, or, in short, to root out of her Mind the continual Doubts which perplexed her, and exhort her to Perseverance.

A CONFUTATION of the SECOND PROOF, drawn from Father Girard's locking himself up in la Cadiere's Chamber.

IF Father Girard has locked himself up in la Cadiere's Chamber, ought one immediately to conclude without any Consideration, That he abandoned himself to the Passion with which they charge him? Would it not be more rea-reasonable, and more Christian-like, to believe that, at the most, he was guilty only of an Imprudence therein? Nevertheless, if we reflect upon the Circumstances and Time when he locked himself in with his Penitent, we shall be forced to own, that what we now look upon as an imprudent Act in him, could not then create any Suspicion; much less be of dangerous Consequence, and that he was under a sort of Necessity of doing in that Manner. To this End, it will be proper to imagine ourselves in his Place, and enter into the Character of the Parties concerned.

We are not ignorant, that we are going to use a Language but little known to the People of this World; but we do not do it so much to justify the Excess of Father Girard's Credulity, as to relate Things, with the utmost Sincerity, just as they happened, and in the same Light, as Father Girard himself had considered them. Wherefore we resolve to use his own Terms; 'tis he himself who is going to explain to us how he acted, and by what Artifices he was his Penitent's Dupe, no body being better able than himself to inform us.

Let us first represent to ourselves an artful, cunning Girl, who has not only impos'd upon Father Girard, but upon all Persons in general who approach'd her Devotees and Worldlings, Seculars, and Regulars, Persons of the greatest Character, and of all Conditions. On the other Hand, let us imagine to ourselves, a Confessor steering his Course directly to God, and judging of other Peoples's Intentions by his own; who, after having for two Years carefully observ'd his Penitents Conduct, has never perceived any thing therein, but what was highly Praise-worthy, and has found her, on all Occasions, very tractable, humble, retired, a Lover of Prayer, and eager after Penance. This Girl, after having inform'd her Confessor, during some time, of her receiving many inward Graces, whereof she seems to have made very good Use, declares on a sudden to him, That her Breast being dilated, in a violent Transport of divine Love, her two first Ribs were raised three Inches above the rest, as happened to St. Philip de Neri. Hereupon Doubts arise in his Mind; but upon reflecting afterwards upon the Girl's holy and regular Behaviour, he cannot imagine that she is so abandoned of God, as to attempt to impose upon her Director, in an Affair of such Importance. Still Doubts arise, and he looks upon them as very rash and injurious Suspicions; besides, nothing is impossible to God: He has heard of such Favours granted to Saints, whose Lives are not reckoned fabulous; wherefore he suspends his Judgment, and contents himself with recommending Silence to his Penitent, and exhorting her to improve all the divine Gifts, without reflecting too much upon them.

On Good-Friday, la Cadiere is seen with her Face covered with Blood, and in a sort of Trance, which lasts (as they say) a considerable ble Time ; she declares afterwards to Father Girard, That she had had our Saviours sacred Stigmata, and the Crown of Thorns, visibly imprinted upon her Head and Body ; these are not vain Chimæra's which she frames out of her own Head, but Matters of Fact which she offers to prove. Some time after she pretends to have found in her Bed, upon her awaking, a miraculous Cross sent from Heaven, and she is ready to produce it ; then within a few Days she perceives, That some Caps are surprizingly stain'd with the Blood which has flowed from the Print of the Crown that is upon her Head ; and lastly she affirms, That on the 8th of May she shall appear miraculously suspended in the Air. In this gradual Succession of wonderful Events, artfully disposed at proper Intervals, one prepared the way for another, and care was taken to relate each Incident with all the Humility, all the Confusion, and all the Reluctance imaginable. Ye inlightned Confessors ! Ye experienced Directors ! Tell us, what would you have done, had you been in Father Girard's Place, on this Occasion ? A Man of the World would not be at all puzzled to answer, but would soon come to a Resolution ; You should, says such a one, either have abandon'd la Cadiere, and have sent her packing for a Cheat, or have stopt her Mouth for ever, by treating her as a Mad-woman. But a Minister of the Lord does not proceed so fast, and precipitates nothing ; he suspends his Judgment, he begs of Heaven the Light that is needful he consults, and he reasons with himself. The Lord's Arm, says he, is not shorten'd, and he can now, as well as formerly, if he finds faithful Souls that are worthy of it, communicate to them, thro' his Mercy, the same Favours as he has granted to other Saints. I find nothing in this Penitent whereof I don't read Examples in the History of the Church; as to God's Part then, all this may be without Difficulty: But what is the Girl's Character? If I judge by what Knowledge I have of her Virtue, she is not, absolutely speaking, unworthy of the singular Favours which she pretends to have received; such Favours are without doubt very uncommon; but, in short, the Lord is the Sovereign Arbiter, and he may dispense his Graces to whom he pleases. Since la Cadere has made me the Depository of her inmost Thoughts, and of the Secrets of her Conscience, I have never observed that she has endeavoured to deceive me, even in the most indifferent Matters; and can I now believe her capable of having Recourse to Fraud and Imposture, and abusing all that is most sacred in Christianity to delude me? Upon what then must I resolve? Shall I rid my Hands of her? That would be a convenient Way to extricate myself from all Perplexity; but would not that be avoiding Trouble, being wanting in my Duty to God, who has intrusted me with the Care of this Soul, and exposing her to be wanting, on her Part, to the Designs which he may have upon her. Shall I look upon her as a distracted Creature, that ought to be dieted? But these are no longer Visions and Revelations which she relates; these are real Matters of Fact, whereof I can satisfy myself by my own Eyes, and upon which she requires me to form my Judgment: Shall I make no Account of what she tells me? And shall I let it drop like a thing indifferent? But if she is in an Error, shall I let her quietly continue so? And if she is not, shall I myself fall into one, by despising the Gifts of God? It is as glorious and advantageous to Religion to be able to make full Proof of a Fact truly miraculous, as it is important and necessary to make appear the Imposture of a false Miracle.

Piety and Charity incline us to believe all things, says St. Paul; but, as he adds likewise, Reason and good Sense require that we should prove all, and satisfy ourselves as far as possible.

'Twas upon these Reflexions that Father Girard determin'd to examine Matters himself: There are particular Cases, wherein we find ourselves oblig'd to act contrary to general Rules; and Prudence itself sometimes makes us guilty of imprudent Actions. Wherefore Father Girard after having long hesitated and deferr'd it, altho' he had been very much press'd by la Cadiere, in the Name, as she said, of God himself, consented, at last, to see her Wounds. And as the Nature of this Action did not allow of his exposing himself to be surpriz'd; and as on both Sides their Intentions were very pure, for Fear any Relation or Friend entering suddenly into the Room, should happen to discover what they desired so carefully to conceal, he at last consented that la Cadriere should lock the Door for some Minutes, till he had made the Inspection; the Door was likewise fasten'd in the same Manner, for a very short while, sometimes by la Cadriere, and sometimes by Father Girard, on five or six other Occasions, when they had a Mind to be private, either to shew or put up Crosses, or Caps, or for some other Reasons, almost of the same Nature.

This is a sincere Account of F. Girard's Conduct, and the Motives that induced him to follow it; and the Candour and Uprightness of Heart, wherewith he hath confessed Things which are not favourable to him, altho' they cannot be proved, ought to convince all the World, how worthy he is of being believed, as to the Falsity of the Facts which he disowns. Let the Authors of the State of the Case, and all the Cadriere's cry out then as long as they please, that Father Girard, during seven or eight Months, spent almost every Afternoon lock'd up with la Cadriere; let them quote thereupon all the Laws and all the Canons ; let them call out to Heaven and Earth for Vengeance ; Father Girard will join with them in calling for it against himself, if he has done what they impute to him.

But let them take Care what they advance ; if they speak Truth, what a strange Notion do they give us of the Virtue of a Girl who is not startled at such private Interviews that have no End, and the Consequences of which have been so dreadful, even in their own Judgment ! What must one think of a Mother, a Regular, a Deacon, and a married Man, who not only suffer these continual private Interviews, but even who procure them, and approve of them ? Will not the Publick justly conclude, That la Cadriere was but a loose Woman, and that she was prostituted by her own Family ? Ye infernal Spirits, rise from the Abyss, and fly to the Assistance of the Cadieres, who have no Refuge but in you ! But 'tis now too late to save the Cadieres, they should have said at first, that they had all been fascinated by Father Girard ; but that Time is now past.

Let us conclude this Article by refuting the Evidence of a certain Pensioner of the Nunnery of St. Clare at Ollioules, whom they make say, in the State of the Case, that Father Girard remained shut up in la Cadriere's Chamber, on the Day that he enter'd the Monastery, from nine in the Morning till four in the Afternoon. To this End, we have Need only of the Evidence of the Superior herself, and the other Nuns of the same Convent, who will not be suspected of having favour'd Father Girard, and who say, in la Cadiere's State of the Case, that the Door was always open after twelve a Clock; besides that we hope it will be proved by the Proceedings, that the Door was never shut; or that, at most, it was so a very short Time, which Father Girard cannot certainly remember; protesting loudly that he never touch'd the Door, and that if it was shut for some moments, it must have been shut on the outside.

A REFUTATION of the THIRD PROOF drawn from the criminal Liberties which they pretend Father GIRARD took with LA CADIERE.

THEY pretend to found the Proof of these criminal Liberties, both upon the Confession of Father Girard, and the Deposition of two or three Servants. But before we particularly confute what they allege upon these two Heads, let us try to shew by some Reflexions the Falsity of the Accusation.

First Reflection. La Cadiere does not pretend to have been so much out of her Senses, from the Time of Father Girard's breathing upon her, till Father Nicholas exorcis'd her, which is above a whole Year, that she had not from time to time lucid Intervals of Reason and Liberty ; she positively affirms it in her Declaration before the Great Vicar ; and if she did not agree to it, is it not known that during all the Time, she has acted, spoke, reason'd, work'd, and apply'd herself to several Affairs, with all her Reason and Liberty ? Let us grant her nevertheless, that she had neither of them the Day after her Return from Aix, when Father Girard would satisfy his Passion ; and even, if they will, on other like Occasions. She cannot however disown but she had the Use of them at the Time of the Embraces and Kisses which she accuses this Father of giving her : For even the Witnesses, which she herself produces, say, that they mutually embraced and kissed each other, which can only be understood of a reciprocal Consent. Now it is not possible to comprehend, how a young Woman of good Sense, as they say she is, could arrive at the Age of Twenty-one, without knowing that it is not lawful to suffer herself to be approached in that Manner, I won't say by a Priest and a Regular, but even by a Man of the World. It is one of the first Lessons which Mothers teach their Daughters ; besides, can such Ignorance agree with the Exhortations and Sermons which she heard, and with the Spiritual Books which she so frequently read ? She ought to have look'd upon Father Girard as a Miscreant and a Pro-

Profligate; nevertheless it is proved both by all her Letters, and by her Lent Journal, that she has always esteemed him as a divine Man, as one of the Elect, and, in short, as a Man who was to guide her to Heaven.

It is very true, say they, but yet she had her Doubts, which her being prepossessed with an high Opinion of her Director's Virtue, made her reject; whence we conclude, that at least she had some Knowledge of the Matter in Question, and that she was herself when her Confessor took these Liberties. Who then hinder'd her from satisfying her Doubts? Were there no other Confessors, no other Persons of Understanding to consult? Or even had she any Need of them? And was it not sufficient to remove her Doubts, in a Case of that Nature, that she attended the Catechizing and Homilies, where she had more than once heard the Commandments explain'd?

Second Reflection. If Father Girard is guilty of the Crime wherewith la Cadiere charges him, whence comes it that not the least Footstep the smallest Sign thereof appears in the Letters written to each other? In private Letters the Heart usually lays itself open, discloses its inmost Thoughts, and reveals its most secret Passions; but, as to these, in vain should we try to wrest and torture them, in order to give them a loose Meaning, they will always breath an Air of Piety, whereof 'tis impossible to deprive them. Whence comes it that la Cadere as must appear from the Proceedings, extoll'd her Director incessantly before her Companions, for his Modesty and extreme Reservedness? Does not this last Article alone shew that she was not so innocent as she would make us believe?

Third Reflection. Lastly, if Father Girard had been inflam'd with such a violent Passion for his Penitent, as they pretend, would he have been so earnest, would he have used so many Exhortations to induce her to go into the Convent? Would he have opposed her quitting the said Convent so warmly, to break with her, as soon as she had executed her Design? Is it in this Manner that the Passion whereof he is accused influences its Votaries? We hope that they who are conversant in the World will easily conceive the Force of so simple and so natural a Reflexion.

Let us now proceed to a particular Examination of the Proofs. What has Father Girard confessed that is so criminal? He acknowledges, That to satisfy himself of the Truth of what la Cadere had told him, he saw her Stigmata transiently, three or four times, in the Space of five Months, with all the Precaution and Modesty that could be desired. And what did he see after all? Why Sores. And can any one believe in good Earnest that these were Objects fit to satisfy impure Desires? But, say they, Matters were not transacted with that modesty which Father Girard
pre-

pretends. Who says so? Where are the Witnesses? La Cadere alone; but ought she to be believed? Did not she retract it? And can her Evidence be of any Weight after this Retraction?

Father Girard could not be convicted of these Facts, since they were transacted without Witnesses; and consequently is not the Confession he made, of the Consequence, whereof he could not be ignorant, a very plain Proof of his Innocence. 'Tis granted, that a Man whose Conscience reproaches him with having perpetrated the most execrable and profligate Actions on Pretence of examining these Wounds, would not have confessed it; but as for Father Girard, being convinced, as he is, within himself, that he was induced to this Action by the purest and most innocent Motives, and that he was forced to it by a kind of Necessity, he does not blush to own it; or if he does blush at Present, 'tis on Account of the Impieties and Sacrilege which he committed with Intent to deceive him.

He farther agrees, that his Penitent having assured him, that two of her Ribs were raised three Fingers Breadth above the rest, by a Transport of Divine Love, and having pressed him to satisfy himself of the Truth, he did once pass his Finger very lightly over the Handkerchief which was about her Neck, without having the Curiosity to see them. The World may laugh as much as they please at Father Girard's Credulity; at least it appears from this Confession, that he did not invent this Miracle, in order to have an Occasion afterwards to 'scel these two Ribs; 'tis la Cadiere herself who invents it; and, in fine, 'tis she who deceives and imposes upon her Confessor; 'tis she, who, to compleat her Malice, now charges him with doing what she herself forced him to do, or rather what he never did. For with what Face dare she talk in her Memorial of indecent Attire, naked Breasts, and fine transparent Linnen, setting up thus for one who was worldly minded, and follow'd the loosest Fashions, when all Toulon knows that nothing could come up to the Modesty of her Dress, her Discourse, or her Behaviour; and that if she had any visible prevailing Passion, it certainly was not Vanity, or Affectation of Finery, but an inordinate Ambition of passing for a Saint.

What Credit can be given to a Person of the Character which la Cadiere now assumes? Especially when she attacks a Regular whose Reputation has hitherto been untainted and irreprovable?

'Tis true, that if la Cadiere only deposed against Father Girard, her Evidence alone would make but little Impression; but when it is confirm'd by other Witnesses, who swear, if not to the same Facts which la Cadiere charges upon Father Girard, at least to others, which render what she avers probable, one cannot, say they, refuse believing her Testimony. Let us see then what Witnesses these are, and what Credit they deserve.

The Depositions of MARY-ANNE MATERONNE, and of LUCRETIA MATERONNE her Sister, both Lay-Sisters belonging to the Turning-Box in the Nunnery of St. Clare at Ollioules.

HOW little soever Persons may know of the Information laid against Father Girard by la Cadriere, they will easily conceive, that she would never have made such an Attempt, had she not previously been assured of Witnesses, who, by what they would depose in Concert with her, might corroborate the Proof of the criminal Liberties whereof she resolved to accuse her Confessor. But, unfortunately for her, she could only find three poor Maid-Servants, who would sacrifice their Conscience and the Truth, to satisfy her Passion, and that of those who have managed this Affair. Such are the Depositions of Mary-Anne Materonne, and Lucretia her Sister, Servants belonging to the Turning-Box in the Convent of St. Clare at Ollioules, as well as that of Clara Berarde, la Cadriere's Maid, who has given Evidence about the Abortion.

Herein, properly speaking, lies the whole Stress of the Information laid against Father Girard. A Reputation so unspotted, and so establish'd as his, could not in the main have been attack'd but by mercenary Souls, and Persons of this Character. But Providence, which takes Care to protect the Innocent, has thought fit that these Witnesses should be convicted of giving false Evidence, in such a Manner as to leave no Room for a Reply; which we shall presently demonstrate.

La Cadriere had already suborn'd Mary-Anne Materonne, when she with her Accomplices took the Resolution of ruining Father Girard; which Resolution they began to put in Execution, that very Day that la Cadriere acted at Toulon the publick Scene of her pretended Possession, wherein she charg'd F. Girard with the most execrable Crimes.

One need give no stronger Proof of the black Design form'd by la Cadriere against Father Girard, than the Note written and signed by her own Hand, wherein she gives leave to Father Nicholas the Carmelite to reveal her Confession even before the Judges, and which is dated some Days before she was pleas'd to act the Demoniac. This being premised, we have Need only of the following Reflexions to evince the Falsity of this Witness's Deposition; which, to say the Truth, is the only one which seems to affect Father Girard, and without which, all that the others say would be of little Moment, and deserve no Attention.

Choir,

Choir, la Cadiere being on the Inside, this Father order'd her, in Presence of la Cadiere, to go to his Inn, and that thereupon she withdrew, but nevertheless staid within by the Church Door, whence she saw them embrace. Now la Cadiere says, upon that very same Head, that Father Girard being desirous to embrace her at the Grate of the Choir, assured her that he had shut the Church-Door. How is it possible to reconcile this Deposition with la Cadiere's Declaration? For, either Father Girard went from the Grate of the Choir, where the Deponent left him, to shut the Church-Door, and then he would not have failed seeing the Deponent; or he never stirr'd from the Grate of the Choir, and then, how can la Cadiere affirm, that Father Girard assured her he had shut the Church-Door?

Secondly, This Deponent says, That she went softly up into the Parlour, where Father Girard was with his Penitent, and open'd the Door suddenly. We ask her, Whence came her Suspicion? Since both at that Time and long after, she look'd upon la Cadiere as a Saint.

Thirdly, We have just seen that she says she open'd the Door suddenly, as must appear from the Proceedings; accordingly Father Girard, when he was confronted with her, did not fail to take Notice of this Circumstance; because it is certain that the Door could not be open'd on the outside, but only on the inside with a String, in the same Manner as the Parlour-Doors of all other Nunneries. This shows the Reason why la Cadere's Advocate, in his Memorial, omitted these Words, having open'd the Door suddenly; and this Omission is a Proof of what we here advance, that the Door could not be open'd on the outside, altho' the Evidence says very positively, that she open'd it on that Side.

Door

Fourthly, If she pretends that she open'd it by pushing or thrusting violently against it; in that Case Father Girard would have had Time to retire, and she would not have seen what she pretends; neither can she say that the Door was half open, for she affirms positively that she open'd it.

Fifthly, What is it this Evidence does, upon seeing Father Girard and la Cadere embracing, notwithstanding the Noise the Door must make in being forced open? Why, she goes up to him very coldly, and asks when, and with what colour'd Ornaments he will say Mass? Was ever any thing more horrible? This alone, were it true, ought it not to prevent giving any Credit to her? Since she looks upon the vilest Actions as things indifferent, and, if we may dare to say it, as a Preparative to the Holy Sacrifice of the Mass.

Sixthly, She says, That she saw them embracing and kissing: And how? Thro' the Grate.

of the Parlour which was then open. Now it must appear by the Proceedings, and by an Inspection of the Place, that this Grate, which is said to have been open'd, is but eight Inches and some Lines square, so that one cannot, without great Difficulty, put one's Head alone through, nor, when through, cannot hold it up. How then can one believe, that they could embrace, as this Evidence avers.

Seventhly, This Witness must have very little Honour or Religion, since she neglected informing either her Superior, or the Observantine, Confessor to the Society, or, in fine, some other Nun, in order to apply some Remedy to such Licentiousness. And as a Proof that she never mentioned a Word of it to any one, not even to her Companions in Jest, which would have been very difficult for a Woman, if it had been Truth; la Cadere preserved her Reputation for Sanctity till she was exorcis'd by the Carmelite, which was two Months after.

Eighthly, Besides the continual Visits which la Cadere and her Brothers made to the Nuns at Ollioules, who have given Evidence in their Favour; it ought to appear from the Proceedings, that Father Cadere was there, in Company with this Witness, for two Hours, two Nights before la Cadere's Declaration, and that his Brother the Abbot went to Ollioules to fetch her, and conducted ducted her to their House, from whence she went directly to the Bishop's Court to make her Deposition.

Ninthly, This Deponent says, That on the Eve of St. Clare, the only Day that Father Girard (who had been making an Exhortation to the Nuns) din'd in the Parlour by the Invitation of the Abbess; *she saw this Father with one Hand hold one of la Cadieré's, and * feed himself with the other*: Nevertheless it is proved by the Letters of August 15, that Father Girard left Ollioules very much incensed against his Penitent, because she either would not, or could not give him the Lent Journal.

Lastly, It must appear by the Proceedings, that la Cadieré's Family promised a Pension to this Witness. Now, can it be deny'd that all these Reasons being added together, amount to the strongest Proof against the Evidence of Mary-Anne Matronne, Servant, belonging to the Turning-Box in the Convent of Ollioules, and that they, at the same Time, render the Depositions of the other Witnesses, whom they bring against Father Girard, very suspicious. For, if it is proved, that this Evidence bore false Witness, what ought to be thought of the Deposition of Lucretia Matronne her Sister? This will be seen more plainly by the Disquisition upon which we are going to enter.

* In Roberts's 'tis render'd (and eat with the other); How long have People eaten with their Hands?

The second Witness whom they oppose to us is, Mary-Anne Materonne's own Sister, likewise a Servant belonging to the Turning-Box at Ollioules. Who does not perceive the Collusion at first Sight? But let us see what she deposes, as it is quoted in la Cadiere's Memorial. She says, That the Day the Father Rector enter'd the Convent, on Account of the Transfiguration of the said Cadiere, he asked Leave of the Abbess, on his going out, to speak one Word in private to the said Cadiere, and that thereupon she saw them both embrace and kiss each other.

This is the real Matter of Fact. Father Girard enter'd the Convent (and 'tis the only Time he ever did enter it) to hear his Penitent's Confession, and to see the Remains, if we may so call it, of her Transfiguration. He went out again in the Evening, and was accompany'd to the Gate of the Convent by the Confessor of the House, the Mother Abbess, and the principal Nuns. Before he went out, la Cadiere desired to say a Word in private to him, to which end, having taken him aside, she talk'd with him a little while; the Place was dark: Father Girard, as is well known, is entirely deaf on one Side, and can only hear Confessions with his left Ear; wherefore he went very close to la Cadiere, and probably stoop'd forward, that he might might understand the better what she said. Where then was Lucretia Materonne? At a Glass-Window, thro' which she pretends to have seen Father Girard kissing his Penitent.

Let us now hear what the Lay-Sister du Prat, who was with her, says upon the same Head; 'tis la Cadieré's Memorial which still supplies us with the Depositions: Sister du Prat then deposes, that on the Day that the Father Rector went into the Convent, on Account of the Transfiguration of the said Cadieré; in the Evening, as he was going out, she saw the said Cadieré, who accompany'd him, embrace him. We cannot tell in what Posture she saw, or thought she saw, la Cadieré; and somebody saying to her they are kissing, she look'd, and saw thro' the Glass that they were talking with their Heads close together, and Face to Face, but she did not see them kiss; she who told her she saw them kiss, was Lucretia Materonne, the Servant belonging to the Turning-Box. Suppose we should grant that no Alteration has been made in the Depositions of these two Sisters (as we are persuaded they have mutilated and changed a great many others that are cited in the Memorial, suppose we keep to what is there testify'd; Who is it that affirms she saw them kissing? Why Lucretia, Sister to Mary-Anne Materonne, who is convicted of bearing false Witness. Who would have made Sister du Prat believe it? Lucretia; who says, they embraced and kissed each other, whilst Sister du Prat, who was in the Dark, and looking thro' a Glass-Window, has the Honesty to confess that she thought she saw, or did see, if you will, la Cadiere put her Arms round Father Girard. Did ever two Sisters understand lying better? And does not this prove clearly what we said above, that we ought not to be surprized, if having resolved to ruin Father Girard, they first made sure of the false Evidence of these two Servants.

The other Testimony quoted in the State of the Case, is, that of the Lady Guerin a Nun; and what does she depose to prove the Incest whereof they accuse Father Girard? She says, That this Father being on the outside of the Grate of the Choir, and la Cadiere within, she saw them touch each others Hands. Can one possibly offer any thing more childish; or that could be of less Consequence to prove such a heinous Crime as that in Question? But if the Deposition of the Lady Guerin is invalidated by other Circumstances, to what will this Proof be reduced, so very weak as it is already? 'Tis certain that a Witness who affirms in her Deposition a thing absolutely impossible, deserves no Belief, and ought to be rejected. Now this is the Case of the Lady Guerin; for it is apparent from the Proceedings, that she has deposed, that Cadiere had discover'd her inmost Thoughts; and this she did in order to prove Father Girard a Sorcerer.

Now

Now can any one be ignorant that God (as we have already observed) reserves the Knowledge of the Secrets of Hearts to himself; and that it is absolutely impossible for the Devil to discover, not only all our Thoughts, be even any one of them that is purely internal. We believe likewise, that it will appear by the Proceedings, that the same Lady Guerin says, That she saw a thick Smoke in la Cadiere's Chamber, in the midst whereof the Devil was undoubtedly playing his Gambols; and that la Cadiere having told her, that she would come and see her at Night, she actually felt herself embraced the Night following as she lay in Bed, altho' la Cadiere never stirr'd out of hers. 'Tis true that these two last Facts will at most prove only that the Lady Guerin is fanciful; but what she affirms that all her Thoughts were known and discover'd by la Cadiere, forces us to conclude, that her Evidence is false, and deserves no Credit.

Now this is the Substance of the Evidence brought against Father Girard; the two Sisters belonging to the Turning-Box of the Convent at Ollioules, and the Lady Guerin, whose Depositions join'd to la Cadiere's Declaration, we were told would amount to a compleat Proof of the Incest imputed to Father Girard; for it is not doubted but if la Cadiere, or her Advocate, who has rummaged over the Proceedings as much as he pleas'd, pleas'd, could have found therein any stronger Evidence, or even any equivalent to this which we have refuted, they would have been careful enough to produce it.

Father Girard therefore, and the Jesuits, may now be easy, they know what they have to fear: It must be own'd, indeed, that they were apprehensive, and not without some Reason, that the continual Pains which has been taken to procure Evidence at any Price, or, to speak more properly, that the Prejudice which many Persons have conceived against them, and which they take a malicious Pleasure in expressing upon all Occasions, would have prompted many more to appear. Father Girard himself, notwithstanding the Testimony of a good Conscience, which he has the Happiness to enjoy, was not without his Fears upon that Head. But, in fine, all this great Noise, all these Threats of Conviction, have ended only in producing three Witnesses, whose Depositions we have just refuted, after such a Manner as must satisfy, as we think, any sensible and reasonable Persons. Let us now proceed to examine the fourth Proof of Incest.

A CONFUTATION of the FOURTH PROOF of INCEST, drawn from the Letters of Father GIRARD, wherein 'tis pretended that his Passion breaks out in every Line.

WE shall not trouble ourselves with entering into the Particulars of this fourth Proof, since it has been resolv'd to print the Letters of Father Girard and la Cadriere together, and to annex them to this Memorial. We are perswaded that the bare Perusal of them will soon undeceive Mankind, as to the perverse and malicious Construction, which the Author of the State of the Case has labour'd to fix upon the former; and that far from finding therein the least Trace of that foolish Passion wherewith they charge Father Girard, they will on the contrary discover only Lessons of Piety, salutary Maxims, and such Advice as directs to the Practice of the most exalted Virtue. But after all, who is it that indited the Answers to Father Girard's Letters? Was it not the Cadieres themselves? As will be proved, after an incontestable manner, by the Discourse prefix'd to these Letters. Now this being once proved, can la Cadriere's Advocate maintain with a good Grace that Father Girard's Letters contain the Quintessence of Gallantry? For this being granted, will he not be obliged to confess that that the Authors of the Answers were Confederates with this Father; consented to the Crime; and shared the Guilt with him? Would he be willing to admit of Consequences so contrary to the End he has proposed to himself in his Memorial? Into what a Perplexity has he brought himself? The only Method he has to take, is to acknowledge (as all Men of Sense must) that Father Girard's Letters abound with Expressions of that Divine Love wherewith his Soul is inflam'd, instead of being full of that impure Passion which he has hitherto sought in Vain therein.

One would think at first, that after having thus refuted these four Proofs, one might be dispensed with from justifying Father Girard from the Charge of procuring Abortion: Hence if he is not guilty of taking the least Liberties with la Cadere, as we have just prov'd, he cannot be guilty of the new Crime whereof they accuse him. Nevertheless not to omit any Thing in a Matter of this Importance, wherein the Reputation of a Priest and a Regular is so essentially concern'd, we will proceed to examine particularly this Grounds of this fresh Accusation.

CONFUTATION of the CHARGE of procuring ABORTION.

[T must be own'd, that Prejudice cannot be carried to a greater Height than it has

has been in this Cause. They misrepresent Father Girard's most innocent Actions, and charge even his Works of Mercy as Crimes. This Father, in the Space of five or six Months, that he went to visit la Cadere when sick, at least affecting to be thought so, carried her some fair Water four or five Times, in a Porringer, to quench her burning Thirst. Immediately they cry out Murder, 'tis Potion to make her miscarry, he has put powdered Powder in the Water. But who says this? Why la Cadere herself; Who are the Witnesses? La Cadere: For it must be observed that la Cadere's Maid, who is the only Witness of his giving her this Water, makes no Mention of any Thing's being put into it. What, did no Body but la Cadere see him prepare this murdering Potion? Did no Body even see him buy the Drugs to compose it? Not at all. With what Impudence then dare they prefer such a black Accusation? Strange Blindness! But what they ascribe to Father Girard, is still much greater. He is about to commit the most horrible of all Crimes, and what the Law punishes with the utmost Severity, and he goes himself, and either asks her Relations, or takes in their Presence, what, in the End, will convict him of his Crime. But what need had he to make up this Draught at la Cadere's? Could not he have prepar'd it at Home? And have carried it her afterwards in a Bottle? After all, he was a Sorcerer; why, has he Recourse here to human Means to make la Cadiere miscarry? Is not the Black-Art sufficient for this Purpose, without the Help of Physick; aye, and to confound it too? But, say they, Why did he take the Pains to fetch this Water himself? Could not he make use of some other Means to procure it her? Into what a particular Account are we forced to enter to justify a simple natural Action, which infinite Numbers of People have, perhaps, practised with a pure Intention in the like Case? He did it then for two Reasons. First, to do an Act of Charity to his Patient; and, Secondly, because there being but one Servant in la Cadiere's Family, she might happen to be out of the Way, or busy when la Cadiere's Thirst was most pressing.

But let us hear what she says herself of this Potion, in her Declaration before the Great Vicar; that Father Girard, at that Time, brought her a Kind of reddish Liquor to drink in a Porringer, for eight Days together. She says the same Thing in her Complaint before the Criminal Judge. Now, Father Girard, who is as worthy of Belief as la Cadiere, maintains, that she never did keep her Bed for eight Days together, nor ever kept her Chamber eight Days together, neither was he ever at her House eight Days successively.

To corroborate the Proof of this Draught they call one Witness, and they call but one; and who is this Witness? Clara Berarde, la Cadriere's own Maid. We may judge of the Force of her Evidence, by what we have seen of the Lay-Sisters at Ollicoules, whom the Cadieres had engaged in their Plot. However, what does Clara Berarde say of this Draught? If we refer to the Abstract of her Deposition, as it is in la Cadriere's Memorial, she deposed, That from the last Carnival, to about the 5th of June following, the Father Rector of the Jesuits came almost every Day to see la Cadriere. The contrary of this Fact, and of those that follow, will, as we hope, be proved by the Proceedings. That he lock'd the Chamber-Door, that he generally came thither about One or Two in the Afternoon, and did not go away till towards Night; that he often fetch'd a Porringer of Water which he carried to la Cadriere.

First, there is no Mention made by this Servant of a Compound-Draught, only of a Porringer of Water; wherefore, as we have observed, la Cadriere is the only Witness of this pretended Composition,

In the Second Place, the Contradiction there is between this Deposition and la Cadriere's Declaration must needs make us sensible of its Falsity. In Effect, when does Berarde say that Father Girard carried these Porringers of Water to la Cadriere? From the Carnival till the 5th of June, which comprehends above three Months. When does la Cadere pretend that these Porringers of Water were brought her by Father Girard? From the 23d of May, till the 6th of June. Since she says in her Declaration, that Father Girard did not consummate the Crime of Incest with her, till after her Return from Aix, which was on the 23d of May; and that about that Time he brought her a Porringer of Water to drink for eight Days successively.

But this Contradiction, however great it is, will seem nothing in Comparison with that which we find in the following Fact, upon which la Cadere's Advocate insists so strenuously.

La Cadere, about a Fortnight after last Easter, declar'd to Father Girard, that after having been crucified by the Divine Justice on Good-Friday, she should soon be crucified again by the Divine Love. And to the End that it should not be thought that we would impose upon her, the Dominican, her Brother, makes her say the same Thing in her Lent Journal. She added, that, in Order to prepare her for this Death, God made her lose all her Blood by little and little, as may be seen in the Beginning of the aforesaid Journal, and in several of her Letters. Father Girard who saw her always in the same Plight, could not, without Difficulty, persuade himself of the Truth of what she told him, wherefore he gave but little Heed thereto. One Day, when he was with her, she, on a sudden, drew an Earthen-Pot from under the Bed, and shew'd it to Father Girard, who had hardly Time to take Notice that there was a reddish Liquor therein, because she hurried it out of her Chamber. This is the Matter of Fact directly as it pass'd, and wherein Father Girard had no farther Concern than has been related. 'Twas not he who ask'd to see this Pot, it was shown him en passant. Nevertheless it is upon this simple Fact that la Cadiere persists in founding her Charge of procuring Abortion. But we hope most evidently to demonstrate the Imposture of this Accusation, by shewing on one Hand, the Contradiction into which la Cadiere herself has fallen, in relating this Fact in her Declaration; and on the other Hand, that which we find between what she asserts, and what her Servant deposes: So true it is that whatever Care is taken to disguise a Lie, it never fails detecting itself some Way or other.

First Contradiction. About what Time does la Cadiere, in her Declaration, fix the showing the Pot to Father Girard? Certainly after the Incest, wherewith she charges this Father. About what Time does she charge him with committing the Incest? We have already said it was after her Return from Aix, which was on the 23d of May, and consequently the Incest could not be perpetrated trated till the 24th or 25th of the same Month. At what Time did la Cadiere go into the Convent at Ollioules? On the 6th of June following, that is, about twelve Days after her Return from Aix. Wherefore how can she affirm in her Declaration, that after Father Girard's having committed Incest, she was three Months without her Menses; after which she voided a Mass of Blood, which she shew'd to Father Girard in her Chamber, at her Mother's at Toulon, Could ever any Imposture be so ill concerted! And can one avoid discovering it!

Second Contradiction. About what Time does la Cadiere's Maid place this very same Fact? We need only read her Deposition in the Memorial which we are refuting.

Two or three Days after Easter, about an Hour after Father Girard had been in the Chamber of the said Cadiere, she half open'd the Door, and gave her, the Deponent, a Chamber-Pot of Blood, ordering her to throw it out.

Now Easter-Sunday happen'd last Year 1730, on the 9th of April, and consequently the Maid places the Fact of the Chamber-Pot's being shown to Father Girard, and receiv'd by her about the 12th, or 13th at most of the same Month; nevertheless we have just seen that la Cadiere herself places it after the 23d of May following. Is not this to be call'd a notorious Contradiction? Let us add a few more Reflexions which arise from the very Circumstances of this Fact, which fully demonstrate the Impossibility, and consequently the Falsity of the Crime, and with which we shall conclude this Article.

First, La Cadriere says, in her Declaration before the Great Vicar, That what she show'd to Father Girard was a Mass of Blood; and in her Complaint before the Criminal Judge, that it was a Lump of Flesh: 'Tis granted. Now, how had she the Courage to trust a Vessel in such Circumstances to a Maid, who might have taken, and actually did take Notice thereof? Had she let her into the Secret? Was she sure she would keep it inviolably, and not speak of it? But, was a Secret of this Importance, wherein her Honour, her Reputation, nay, her Life, was at Stake, to be trusted to a Servant, who might have been turned away next Day? It is not to be believed.

Is it not as incredible, that Father Girard should stand by a calm Spectator of a Fact wherein he was so deeply concern'd? There is no mention made of his Uneasiness, his Perturbation, or his Anger, when he saw this Vessel pass out of la Cadriere's Hands into her Maid's; they content themselves with making him cry out, Oh, what Impudence! What, could a Priest, a Regular, a Confessor, who saw the Conviction of his Crime in the Hands of a Servant, stand by, in cool Blood, and not fly into any Passion, nor do his utmost to bury this Proof in the thickest Darkneſs? What Measures had he then to keep? He was ſure of being utterly undone, if the Veſſel ſhould remain in the Hands of the Servant, and ſhe ſhould ſpeak of it: Was it not natural, in the firſt Transports of his Paſſion, to have cry'd out Murther? To have ſnatch'd it away from her; and afterwards to have conſider'd how to diſpoſe of what they pretend it contain'd?
bury

Secondly, The Lady Abbess of the Monastery at Ollioules, and the Lady de l'Eſcot ſay, in their Re-examinations, as the Author of the Memorial informs us, p. 143, that the firſt Time Father Girard ſaw them, he ask'd, whether la Cadiere had loſt much Blood; and that he added, that when ſhe was at Home ſhe had loſt above twenty Pounds; whence 'tis concluded that this great Diſcharge was the Conſequence of a Miſcarriage.

Now, ſuppoſing this Fact to be true, which would prove that the Abortion happen'd after her Return from Aix, eight or ten Days before her entering the Convent of Ollioules, and not two or three Days after Eaſter, as the Servant avers; ſuppoſing, I ſay, the Fact to be true, would not Father Girard have been the moſt ſenſeleſs extravagant Wretch upon Earth, to ask ſuch a Queſtion, if he knew himſelf in the leaſt guilty of procuring the Abortion wherewith he is charged? Could he have acted a more ſtupid or more indiſcreet Part, according to la Cadiere's Account?

count? On the contrary, is not even this Question itself, granting it to be true, a most natural and full Proof of his Innocence?

But, notwithstanding the Advantage which Father Girard might derive from what they make him say to these Nuns, he had rather forego it, than the Truth, which is infinitely more dear and more precious to him. Wherefore he positively denies having ever spoke such Words; and he ought the more to be believed, as he has confessed Things infinitely more dangerous than this to which he refuses his Assent at present.

In short, if we take the Pains to recollect, what we have said elsewhere, of the Evacuations of Blood which la Cadiere had regularly every Month, and which she had the Cunning to turn to her own Advantage in the Parts which she intended to act, we shall be at a Loss to find where to place the three Months wherein her Menses stopt, as she pretends, after that Father Girard had committed Incest with her; and consequently the Abortion, which she charges him with procuring, will prove but a Chimæra, or an outrageous Calumny.

In Effect, according to la Cadiere, this Stoppage of her Menses, and this Suspicion of Pregnancy, must happen about the Middle of the Year 1730. Now, if it is proved that from February to the following October, she has never missed the Infirmities common to Women, what will become of her Miscarriage?

On the 14th Day of her Lent Journal, which falls precisely on March 8, she says, This Sorrow for the Sins of Mankind was so piercing, that it oblig'd me to keep my Bed, and made me spit, and otherwise lose a considerable Quantity of Blood, &c.

On the 7th of April, being Good-Friday, she had a Transfiguration, when she was seen with her Face all besmeared with Blood.

On the 8th of May, another Transfiguration, attended with the same Besmearing.

On June 11, She wrote to Father Girard, that she had just had a violent Spitting of Blood, together with a great Discharge otherwise.

On July 7, she had another Transfiguration in the Convent of Ollioules, and her Face was besmeared with Blood.

On the 8th of August, she wrote to Father Girard, The Physick has caused such a Spitting of Blood, that I am forced to keep my Bed, which has frighten'd all the Society; who, at their Return from Mass, found me quite cover'd with Blood.

And in her Letter of the 9th of September to the same Father, she says, My Hands and Feet were all stain'd with Blood at the same Time, as the Abbess, who was Witness thereunto, first made me observe.

Now, since we have proved that the extraordinary Incidents which beset la Cadicre did not proceed from the Operations of the Devil, but from her own Impostures and Malice, these Discharges, and these Besmearings of Blood, which happen'd regularly at the End of each Month, can no longer be ascribed to any other Cause, than the usual Infirmities of her Sex; and consequently there could be no Stoppages, nor no Suspensions of Pregnancy, about the Time that la Cadere has pitch'd upon, to render her Charge of procuring Abortion more probable.

It will be thought, perhaps, that we have dwelt too long upon this Part of the State of the Case; but could it be avoided? After all, a Regular Priest, and a Confessor, was to be vindicated from the most heinous Accusation that could possibly be brought against him; ought we to have neglected any Thing that might justify his Innocence in the Eyes of the whole World? Accordingly we flatter ourselves that we have demonstrated it incontestably.

If one could desire any thing more, it would be, that la Cadere herself should at last acknowledge his Innocence. And has she not acknowledged it by her Retraction on February 27, and so on till the 10th of March? What more authentick Justification could Father Girard have wished? And do not all Persons, who are not animated by Passion, or misled by Prejudice, acknowledge therein how prevailing the Force of Truth is over a Conscience perpetually tormented with the Sense of its Guilt? Our Adver-

Adversaries, who have been but too sensible of the mortal Wound given them by this Retraction, have in vain endeavour'd to elude the Force thereof, by the most ridiculous Suppositions, and the blackest Aspersions. All their Efforts have only served to show the Perplexity into which it has plunged them; this Recantation wherein la Cadere persisted so many Days, and which was founded upon Truth and Reason, carries with it such a Conviction, as they will never be able to get over.

How many Reflexions, sufficient to justify the Conduct with which Father Girard is now reproached, will not this Retraction furnish? But we leave that to the discerning Judgment of the Court; and that we may not relapse into Prolixity, wherewith we almost reproach ourselves, will hasten on to the Article of Subornation of Witnesses.

Of the Subornation of Witnesses.

IN this Part of the Accusation, as well as the former, we shall meet with several Contradictions that are very sensibly repugnant to la Cadere's Proceedings, as well as to the Arguments which she brings in Justification of them.

On the 16th of November, at Night, la Cadere was pleased to act the Demoniac, and she was exorgis'd with a great deal of Clamour and Scandal.

Hereupon the Bishop of Toulon's Great Vicar went to her House on the 18th to draw up a verbal Process of all the Facts which had confusedly come to his Knowledge. He is inform'd by la Cadriere's own Mouth, that she had been bewitched by Father Girard's breathing upon her; that at his Instigation she had consented to be possessed, and that thereupon she was so; that Father Girard had taken Advantage of the Moments when she was deprived of her Senses, to satisfy his Passion; and, as she alledg'd Facts without any Probability, in order to confirm the Truth, she assures the Great Vicar, that she had acquainted la Guyol, la Battarelle, la Gravier, la Laugier, and other Penitents, of Father Girard, with her Condition, during the two Years that she was under his Direction; and that they, in their Turn, had been in the same Case; from which some of them had been deliver'd by Exorcism.

The Great Vicar then finding that these were Facts of too great Importance, not to be inquired into by a judicial Information, communicated this verbal Process to the Proctor, who thereupon demanded an Information.

Could * the Proctor avoid making an Enquiry into Crimes which so nearly concern'd him

* Mr. Roberts's Translator has fallen here into another gross Mistake, for Want of Understanding the English of Cette Partie Publique, which is a French Phrase for the Proctor, who, in the Exercise of his Office, is call'd la Partie Publique, and le Veu.

him in the Exercise of his Office? And could he take a more certain Method for the Discovery of these Crimes, than by hearing the Depositions of all the Persons who had been pointed out by la Cadiere herself, and who thereby were become necessary Evidences?

If the Proctor had not proceeded, they would not have fail'd objecting to us, that this Dissimulation in him was a Sign of his conniving with the Party accused.

If, after having preferred his Complaint, he had summoned Strangers as Witnesses, who had had no Knowledge of the Affair, they would not have fail'd saying, that far from endeavouring to dive into the Truth, his only Design was to suppress it.

Wherefore he apply'd himself to discharge his Duty, by proceeding in the very same Method which la Cadiere herself had set him; he summoned the Witnesses whom she had named, and as the Accusation is laid against a Confessor, who, according to la Cadiere, had abused his Function, debauch'd all his Penitents, and form'd a little Seraglio of them, to use her own Words, these very Penitents are summon'd, the verbal Process and the

Vengeur Public, as he might have seen if he had consulted his Author, in Page 57 of la Cadiere's Pactum; accordingly, instead of saying (Could the Proctor, &c.) he says (as Father Girard was now publickly accused, could he neglect procuring an Information which so nearly affected his Ministerial Capacity?) mistaking again the Word Ministere, which signifies the Proctor's Function, for Father Girard's Ministerial Capacity, Part II. of Father Girard's Defence, Page 71.

Complaint which la Cadriere had preferred before the Criminal Judge was read to them; what could be more exact and regular?

Were not these the Witnesses that were necessarily to be heard, in order to discover and come at the Truth?

These Witnesses have accordingly been examin'd, both for the Plaintiff and the Defendant conformably to Law; Now, if, instead of proving what la Cadriere has advanced in her Declarations, they justify Father Girard's Conduct; if they make it appear, by their Depositions, that there has neither been any Sorcery, Quietism, Spiritual Incest, or Procuring of Abortion; if their Testimony gives the Lie to Cadriere's Memorial; it must be ascribed to the Truth alone, and not to the Subornation or Forgeries of the Witnesses. They were not suspected when la Cadriere call'd upon them to prove the Facts which she advanced; why should they become so, when being bound by a solemn Oath, and constrained by the Force of Truth, they depose the contrary to what she affirm'd?

In vain does la Cadriere, in this Part of her Memorial, croud Facts upon Facts, without any Proof, to demonstrate the Subornation of Witnesses; not one of these Facts is true. Yes, we protest it in the Face of the Court, and of the whole Universe (we ask Pardon for the Expression; ) 'tis false that Father Sabatier any Ways contributed to the raising the Prosecution; 'tis false that ever any Violence lence was used to la Cadriere, in the Convent of the Ursulines at Toulon, in order to oblige her to retract her Complaint; 'tis false that when Messire Berge went to her, out of Charity, to hear her Confession, he was guarded by Father Sabatier and two Witnesses; 'tis false that the Chancellor and the Register ever carry'd the Proceedings to the Jesuits, to shew them the Depositions of the Evidences; 'tis false that any Jesuit stood at the Entry into the Bishop's Court, to tamper with the Witnesses, and persuade them to conceal the Truth; Lastly, 'tis false that the Chancellor has struck out of the Depositions Part of the most material Facts. And with what Face dare they heap at all Adventures, and without Proof, so many Fallities one upon another? One can attribute this Rashness only to the desperate Efforts of Passion, on seeing itself abandon'd by Truth.

But, say they, has Father Girard left one Stone unturn'd to elude the Proof resulting from the Information, and the Deposition of the Maid belonging to the Turning-Box in the Convent at Ollioules? Did not Sister de Cogolin offer her Service to engage the Lady de Beauffier the younger to suborn some Witnesses, in order to infuse Suspicions of this Maid, and thereby bring the Veracity of her Evidence in Question.

This Objection will fall to the Ground, as soon as one is inform'd of the real Matter of Fact. Sister de Cogolin being persuaded, that the Accusation form'd against Father Girard was was an Imposture ; and having besides some Knowledge of Part of the Facts which prove the Falsity of the Maids Deposition ; consults the Lady de Beauffier about the Method to be taken to come at the Discovery of the Truth. There are neither Menaces, Promises, nor Authority, made Use of in her Letter, to engage any one whatsoever to bear Witness, even in Favour of the Truth. Wherefore it can neither be a Design to corrupt or suborn Evidence, but pure Zeal which induces her to write familiarly to her Friend, to do what Truth should require of her.

One need only read this Letter to be convinced thereof ; it is but an Answer, as the Letter expressly shows, to a third Person, who interests herself, if they will have it so, in what concerns Father Girard ; but neither Sister de Beauffier, or the Lady de Cogolin, do any thing herein which can make them in the least suspected of Subornation.

The Lady Beauffier had written to the Lady de Cogolin her Friend, with whom she had long had a Correspondence, that the Maid, who had deposed against the Father Rector, was a Woman of a loose Life ; that they had good Proofs thereof ; and that several Witnesses who had given Evidence, and some others who had not yet been summoned, would be able to attest it. She added, that these same Witnesses had heard this Maid say, that la Cadiere was a Saint, and that she work'd Miracles ; that they were assured of her particular Acquaintance with the Family of the Cadieres; and that they had understood besides, that she was promised a Pension from them for deposing. 'Twas upon these Circumstances that the Lady de Cogolin, being urged by her Friend, immediately answers; As to what concerns the Maid's bad Morals, we must not pretend to prove in what, for that would be commencing a new Prosecution; 'twill be sufficient to summons Madame Camelin the younger, Madame Portalis, Mademoiselle Vialis, and some others of your House, who have not as yet deposed. These are the Witnesses whercof the Lady Beauffier had spoken in her Letter. Certainly hitherto there is nothing from whence any Subornation can be inferr'd; it was natural for Persons, so well assured as they were of Father Girard's Innocence, to write thus mutually to each other, and discourse of a Prosecution that was carried on under their Nose, and become very much the Subject of Conversation; the Deposition of the Maid in particular being publicly known at Toulon, and even at Aix, through the Pains the Cadieres had taken for that Purpose.

The Lady de Cogolin goes on; Fear nothing for your own Part, you shall not be exposed in any manner, or for any thing, that may create you the least Trouble. This shows that the Lady Beauffier, who knew to how great a Degree the Abbess, the Mistress of the Novices, and some others had espoused the Cause

Cause of the Cadieres, was apprehensive of their knowing that she concern'd herself in discovering the Truth, and the Innocence of the Defendant. We don't always care, when we give Informations about any Matters of Importance, that they should be known to come from us. She afterwards gives her an Account of the Tryal, and says, That it will be enough to invalidate the Maid's Evidence, if the Persons mentioned by the Lady Beaufler, attest not a falsity, but what they know.

Is not here a Subornation finely prov'd, because two indifferent Persons conferr'd together by Letters, unknown to Father Girard, about what might conduce to his Justification? We say, unknown to him, because Father Girard, who is so scrupulous of speaking Truth on all Occasions, protests that he never had any knowledge of this Letter; and altho' the Lady de Cogolin presents his Respects to her Friend, she does it, as it often happens, without Commission. It is also contrary to Truth, as it is well known to the whole Convent of Ursuline Nuns, and even to all Toulon, that the Lady de Cogolin ever owned, much less declared on making Proof of the Letters being Genuine, as they have dared to affirm, that 'twas Father Girard and the Lady de Guerin who made her write this Letter. What they farther add, of the Scene that was acted in the Monastery of the Ursulines at Toulon, on Account of the Lady de Cogolin's Confession, is no less false and base. One must know little of the Piety, Politeness, and Education of the Ladies of this Monastery, to ascribe such a kind of Behaviour to them.

But if the Depositions of the Ladies de Beauffier, de Camelin, and others have concurred to justify Father Girard, whereof we are as yet ignorant, it is not at all owing to any Impression which the Lady de Cogolin's Letter made upon their Minds, but to the Force of Truth; since it is certain that Sister Beauffier never receiv'd it, but that it was intercepted by the Abbess who deliver'd it to la Cadere. Besides, what need was there to have Recourse to the Depositions of these Witnesses for Father Girard's Justification? Is it not evident by all that has been advanced in this Memorial?

In vain do they endeavour to render void the Evidence of Father Aubany, Guardian of the Convent of Observantines at Ollioules; as if our Cause stood absolutely in Need of such a Support. Nevertheless, in order to do Justice to Truth, and re-establish the Reputation of this Regular, who has been so unworthily used in la Cadere's Memorial, it is proper here to inform the Publick, that that Father was actually accused by the Instigation of the Maid Materonne, seconded by some Nuns, over whom she had an absolute Ascendant, not of having ravish'd a Girl of thirteen Years old, as they assert in the Memorial, morial, but of having been guilty of some indecent Behaviour with this Girl, who was only Servant to an ordinary Tradesman at Toulon. He was afterwards clear'd of this Charge, by the Discovery of the Imposture and Calumny, and by the Recantation of the Girl herself, in an Instrument executed before Hugues, a Notary at Toulon, on the 9th of August 1730, above two Months before la Cadere preferr'd her Complaint.

Again, How is this Accusation of Suborning Witnesses to be reconciled with what they affect to publish every where, that the Proceedings contain an entire Proof of the Crimes which are imputed to Father Girard. This Subornation, according to la Cadere's own Account, tended only to invalidate the Maid's Deposition; nevertheless this Deposition, which they have taken Care to cite at length, with what exactness we don't know, cannot support itself, as has been clearly shown; and even if it should subsist in its full force, it would not prove one of the Crimes wherewith they charge Father Girard.

What Advantage do they pretend to derive to themselves from Examples taken out of Books which have been decry'd a long time? They ought to have confin'd themselves to the particular Circumstances of the Cause; and not to have broke out (as they have done) into injurious Expressions against the Jesuits; nor to have reviv'd odious Facts, the Fallhood of which has been so often proved, and which serve only to discover more and more the Passion wherewith Father Girard's Accusers are animated.

If Father Girard's Defence had Need of being set in a fairer Light, and we were obliged to have Recourse to the same Methods which are used against us, that is, to make the same Outcry as they have about Subornation of Evidence, with what Ease, and with how much more Justice might we not convict la Cadriere herself of Subornation.

The Witnesses she has produced have only been able to alledge Facts, the Fallity whereof they know; we have already proved this upon the three famous Witnesses who have acted so great a Part in this Information; we mean la Cadriere's own Maid, and the two Sisters belonging to the 'Turning-box in the Convent of St. Clare at Ollioules. We have proved it upon the Lady Guerin, a Nun in the same Monastery; and we can make it appear equally of several others, by only citing their Depositions as they are set down in la Cadriere's State of the Case.

Mary Hermitte says, that she has seen the Blood trickling down la Cadriere's Head and Face, and her Hands dropping Blood at the same time: Whilst it ought to appear by the Proceedings, that in all the Scenes which la Cadriere acted of metamorphosing herself into an 'Ecce Homo, this Blood was always observed to

to be dry and congealed, as is owned even in the Memorial, by the Lady de l'Escot.

The same Hermitte asserts, that when Father Girard was at the Convent at Ollioules, he was shut up in la Cadriere's Chamber, from nine a Clock in the Morning till four or five at Night; which is contradicted by all the other Witnesses cited even in la Cadriere's Memorial.

One Dalmassé, a poor Beggar, who earns a miserable living very hardly, by going to and fro between Ollioules and Toulon, deposes the most absolute Falshoods; we cannot quote the very Expressions, because they have taken Care not to insert them in la Cadriere's Defence; but the Court will not fail taking notice of them, as well as of the two Witnesses, whose Names we can't remember, who boldly affirm that Father Girard went thrice a Week to Ollioules, altho' it must evidently appear by the Proceedings, that he never went above once a Week; and most commonly but every Fortnight.

What must one think of those Witnesses who having seen Mary-Anne Laugier, in Convulsion Fits, and knowing that she had been subject to such hysterical Ailments from her Childhood, have nevertheless sworn concerning them, as if they had been the Effect of her being possess'd with the Devil, and relate as a Proof thereof what she said in her Delirium, her heated Imagination on bringing into her Mind what she had heard her Acquaintance la Cadriere say, when she pretended to be actuated by the Devil in December and January?

The Lady de l'Escot relates, in her Re-examination, the ridiculous Story of the Sacrament's being given to la Cadriere, on the 9th of July, by Father Girard, altho' he was then at Toulon, and says, that she had heard from the Lady Beaussier that he had confess'd it. The Lady Guerin also affirms, that she heard the same from the Lady Beaussier; and yet this Lady says not a Word thereof, neither in her Deposition, or her Re-examination; for if she had mentioned it, the Author of the Memorial would not have fail'd taking Notice thereof.

What Credit ought to be given to Witnesses, who affirm that they have seen Marks of the Devil's Claws upon la Cadriere's Body? Does not this Evidence carry with it a Proof of Weakness, or Malice, in the Person who asserts it?

As for the rest, it must be observ'd, that 'tis always in their Re-examinations, that these Nuns testify the most singular and the most important Facts against Father Girard. Were they ignorant of these Facts when they deposed? Or, will they say, with the Author of the Memorial, that the Chancellor prevaricated in taking their Evidence? Wou'd the criminal Judge have suffer'd this? How comes it then that the Chancellor is so exact in writing at Length the Depositions of the two Materonnes, and of la Cadriere's Maid, which would make a much greater Impression than what these Nuns say, if their Depositions were true? Let us add, that if we examine well what these Nuns say in their Re-examinations, we shall find that they contradict themselves, and that what they aver is not consistent with the Good they have said, and the Character they have given of Father Girard in their Depositions, as may be seen particularly, in the Re-examinations of the Lady de l'Escot and the Lady Abbess.

In order rightly to understand what we now mean, it is proper to know that la Cadriere having been confronted at Toulon with above forty Witnesses, and having thereby found what the Substance of their Depositions against her and her two Brothers was, the latter, with Father Nicholas, left no Stone unturn'd to avert the Danger that threaten'd them; and as all the Witnesses had been examin'd but those of Ollioules, they had no other Refuge but to gain over, at any Price, these Nuns, that they might add in their Re-examinations, right or wrong, any thing that might affect Father Girard, and favour them.

To be convinced hereof, one need only take Notice of this one Point, which must appear from the Proceedings. La Cadriere had seen by the Letters which Father Girard had put into the Hands of the Commissioners in her Brother's Writing, that it would be concluded they had indited them as well as the Lent Journal. What Course should they take in this Extremity? They could find none more plausible than to get the Nuns who were of Materonne's Party, to subjoin in their Re-examinations; that they had seen la Cadriere dictating the Letters, and the Lent Journal, to Father Cadriere, a Circumstance, which they had pass'd over in Silence in their Depositions, and which is absolutely false. For were they present when the Cadieres were writing? And, how did they know whether they were writing these Letters or the Lent Journal, so as to be able to swear it [as they do, and as la Cadriere says in her State of the Case?]
mis-

Let us conclude; that if it were necessary for Father Girard, to make his Adversaries appear guilty of Subornation of Witnesses, he could bring infinitely stronger Proofs than la Cadriere has brought against him.

But, add they, who can believe that la Cadriere prefer'd her Complaint to the Criminal Judge out of Wantonness, at the same Time that she only desired to bury her own Shame, and her Confessor's Infamy in the thickest Darkness? Can a Person, who has always been so unblameable in her Conduct, be suspected of such an Extravagancy? Was it not rather the Great-Vicar's Accedit to her House, and causing a great Noise and Scandal, which forc'd her, in Spite of herself, to make her Complaint, and discover all that she had suffered under Father Girard's Direction? And can this Complaint, which was prefer'd immediately, and without Premeditation, be the Fruits of a Conspiracy?

'Tis Time to discover the secret Motives of the Proceedings of la Cadiere, her Brothers, and Father Nicholas the discalceated Carmelite. [To this End, we must first lay down, as a Principle, that there is in this Cause a Body of Delinquency, and that the only Question is, to set the Saddle on the right Horse. La Cadiere has placed all the Guilt to the Account of Father Girard, whom she accuses of Sorcery, Quietism, Incest, procuring Abortion, and Subornation of Witnesses.

But as all these Accusations have been overthrown, this Body of Delinquency no longer subsists; wherefore we must find out another, which can only be the Crimes with which la Cadiere, her Brothers, and Father Nicholas the Carmelite are charged.

This being granted, let us now see what the Crimes of these co-accused may be?]'Tis certain, that when one considers Father Girard's Character for Virtue, with his constant Reputation for Piety, and his unblemish'd Innocence, which the sharpest Darts of the keenest Malice have not been able to wound, one cannot help thinking that there is a Confederacy form'd against him. We don't mean hereby that the criminal Design of ruining him him was form'd at once ; no, at first it was only Spleen and Jealousy, afterwards it grew to Hatred, and at last to Rage and Malice. They did not at first design to dishonour him publickly, but only to decry him in the good Opinion of his Diocesan. But this Stratagem not succeeding, but, on the contrary, turning to the Disadvantage of the Contrivers, they have had Recourse to all Manner of Means, and carried their Design as far as it would go. All the Characters were properly disposed for the Execution of this execrable Tragedy ; to be convinced of this, one need only recollect what has been said throughout this Memorial. La Cadiere, especially, was very capable of succeeding either in the Part of a Saint or a Demoniac, and Father Girard, a Man of the utmost Uprightness and Integrity, was very proper, for his Part, to fall a Victim to their Machinations.

Accordingly, we see la Cadiere, at first, practice only common Virtues, and proceed from thence insensibly to the Exercise of those of a more exalted Nature ; and when she has gain'd her Confessor's good Opinion, when she is fully assured thereof, she dazzles his Eyes with Miracles. In Vain does he resist, and desire Time for Reflexion before he believes ; they would not allow him that Leisure ; the Miracles crowd one after another, if I may use that Expression, and in still greater Abundance.

Hereupon Father Girard is surpriz'd, and fluctuates between Admiration and Mistrust; he thinks he knows his Penitent, and don't believe her capable of deceiving him, inasmuch as a miraculous Apparition directs her to go into a very austere Convent. She is no sooner in this Retirement, but new Miracles are wrought; the whole Society being surpriz'd, publish them, and look upon la Cadiere as a Saint. But so great a Constraint as she put upon herself cannot last; she grows disgusted with the Religious State which she has embrac'd; whereupon she counterfeits new Miracles in Order to show that she must quit it. However, Father Girard will give no Credit to these last Miracles, but begins to distrust her, and strenuously opposes this Alteration: In short, she quits the Convent in Spite of his Advice, and he breaks with her.

The Fear of losing the Fruits of so many Miracles, now seizes her; she apprehends, and not without Reason, that being abandoned by a Confessor who is highly esteem'd, she should likewise lose her Reputation for Sanctity, wherefore she makes several vain Efforts to retain him, as may be seen by her three Letters in the Month of September; but finding she cannot succeed, she puts herself under the Direction of Father Nicholas, a very proper Person to support the Fame of her Miracles.

Accordingly they did revive in the Hands of this new Confessor; but no sooner did the first Miracle make its Appearance, than it is confounded; and by whom? By Father Girard, who detects its Imposture. Hatred and Despair immediately succeed in the Room of Spleen and Envy; wherefore being no longer able to preserve the Character of a Saint, and maintain the Credit of her false Miracles, she resolves to act the Part of a Demoniac, in order to palliate her sacrilegious Impostures. There is a great Affinity between these two Characters; and whoever has met with Success, in acting the one, need not fear being qualify'd to succeed in the other.

Behold then la Cadere, who is in an instant made to pass from the Society of Angels into the Company of Devils, and Father Nicholas who offers to deliver her from such unwelcome Guests. Accordingly he does deliver her, but without Noise, and in the Country, having no other Spectators but the Bishop of Toulon, in whose good Opinion 'twas design'd to ruin Father Girard.

But this Scene not meeting with all the Success that was expected, in convincing this Prelate that la Cadere was possess'd; an Offer was made to produce before him between fifteen and twenty of Father Girard's Penitents, who, like her, were under the Power of the Devil. A Day and Place is appointed to give evident Proof of these Persons being possessed, (as if 'twas in one's Power to make the Devil act as one pleases;) and great Pains are taken to persuade Father Girard's Penitents to pass for Demoniacs; but this Point could never be gain'd of any but la Battarelle, and l'Allemande the Mother, two Persons very famous in this Story, whose weak Understanding must appear from the Proceedings.

They set out then from Toulon with la Cadriere, and Father Nicholas, who is arm'd for the Encounter with the Violet Stole, the Ritual, and Holy Water. All the Company, who were then very gay, after having dined at la Cadieré's, repaired to her Country-House, where the Devil was not yet arrived to take Possession of them. But no sooner did the Bishop come thither, but Father Nicholas went to meet him; and told him that he should soon see what he would not have believed. After which, having conducted him into the Apartment where these Women were, la Battarelle throws herself upon the Ground before his Face, rolls about the Floor, and shrieks hideously; whilst l'Allemande being possessed with a Devil that was more moderate, and more suitable to her great Age, is contented with groaning in a Chair.

In the mean while, Father Nicholas triumphs in the midst of these pretended Demoniacs; but no sooner does the Bishop express his Uneasiness, (more in order to discover the Truth, than to free himself from la Battarelle's piercing Cries). but they promise to put an End to the Uproar. Accordingly, it instantly ceases, without the Help of an Exorcism; which made the Prelate immediately perceive, that the whole Design of this grossly contrived Artifice, was to impose upon him.

Accordingly, some Days afterwards, Father Nicholas and Father Cadiere's Power of Preaching and Confessing was revoked; upon which they made many vain Efforts to get re-instated; but as it was not thought proper to mind them, they had no Refuge left but in Despair. Wherefore, in order to justify, in the Sight of the World, the pretended Necessity of their Exorcisms, they engaged la Cadiere to act this Scene over again, at Toulon, but in a much more remarkable Manner, between the 16th and 17th of November, when the whole City flock'd thither; and what Witnesses were wanting before, were abundantly supplied here. 'Twas after this Scene that la Cadiere made her Declaration before the Great Vicar, and her Complaint before the Criminal Judge of Toulon; wherein she belches out, against Father Girard, all the vilest Reproaches that the Devil himself could have suggested to her, had she been actually possessed by him.

Can one then see a more evident Confederacy? First, in la Cadiere's two Brothers, to make their Sister pass for a Saint that work'd Miracles; and afterwards in Father Nicholas, to have these same Miracles (which have been discovered to be Impostures) thought the Operations of the Devil, and the Effects of the Black-Art.

We see F. Cadiere and his Brother ready to be subservient to their Sister, in all the different Parts which she is pleased to act; either to extol her Sanctity; to cry up her Miracles (of the Falsity whereof they must be convinced); to compose Memorials and Letters, in order to give them Credit, and make them publick in the World; to follow and second her in her pretended State of Possession; to exorcise her without Authority as did the Ecclesiastick, or to enter into all her Views, and even to suggest them to her, in order to destroy F. Girard.

As for F. Nicholas, do not all his Steps make it plainly appear, not only that he is in the Confederacy, but even that he is actuated with a Sort of Fury? And, if la Cadiere, in her Retraction, wherein she persisted 11 Days, had not inform'd us herself who was the principal Author of this truly diabolical Contrivance, could we be mistaken therein, when we consider his Conduct during the whole Scene? The Imposture of la Cadiere's Miracles is no sooner proved, but in order to extricate her and her Brothers from this false Step, he introduces the System of Magick to explain them, and make the Guilt fall upon F. Girard. These Miracles cannot be ascribed to the Almighty Power of God, F. Nicholas converts them on a sudden into the Operations of the Devil; and in order to concert with la Cadiere and her Brothers some Method to persuade first the Bishop thereof, and then the Publick, he is seen to disappear from his Convent, and shut himself up Night and Day at la Cadiere's Country-House; where, as is well known, he little observed those Measures and that Reservedness which is always to be expected from Persons of his Function.

He

He has not been able to disown it himself. Does la Cadere return to Town? He follows her, and is every Day at her House, from whence, very often, he does not retire till unseasonable Hours. 'Twas in these continual private Interviews that they plotted, and concerted all the Measures of the Scheme which we see at present put in Execution.

There is no Room to doubt thereof; let us examine la Cadere, let us not even, if they please, have any Regard to her Retraction, but hear her in the Accusation which she at first form'd against him. Who gave her Instructions to attribute all the Extraordinary Accidents that beset her to the Devil? 'Twas F. Nicholas, he has gloried in it himself. Who directed her to fill her two Declarations with so much Obscenity and Infamy? F. Nicholas. This Point is evident by the System she at present follows, pretending that this Father's Exorcism open'd her Eyes, almost as the forbidden Fruit did those of our First Parents. Let them not say that F. Girard taught her such Lessons, she would herself cry out against this Supposition; for if F. Girard had given her any evil Instructions, she would not have failed to quit him, and would not have had so much Esteem and Veneration for him, as she expresses in all her Letters to the End.

Who inform'd her that she had been made to miscarry? Father Nicholas, 'tis not to be doubted. What, would she have suffer'd F. Girard to approach her, if she had known that he had made her miscarry? 'Tis easy to be seen that we might, in the same manner, go thro' and account for all the Crimes wherewith she charges F. Girard; but Modesty will not permit us, to proceed any farther.

'Tis F. Nicholas therefore who has invented this whole System; accordingly he has spared no Pains to make the most, and inculcate the Truth, of this admirable Contrivance. The Proceedings must contain

Part of the surprizing Methods to which he has had Recourse to compass his Ends. He will have it at any Rate, that most of F. Girard's Penitents are in the same Condition with la Cadriere; wherefore he sollicitis and presses them very earnestly, and at last does persuade two of them to be exorcis'd, by which Means he has made them stark mad. Every melancholy hypochondriack Humour changes immediately upon his Appearance into the being possessed by the Devil; and he exorcises not only without any Foundation, but even without observing any of the Rules prescribed by the Church.

He is suspended; he no longer observes any Measures, nor follows the Dictates either of Truth or Justice; hence proceeded the Part which he was so eager to act in la Cadriere's last Scene. He calls in Witnesses, he maintains, in Opposition to the Ministers of the Cathedral, that she is possessed; and cites, as a Proof, all the different Grimaces whereupon la Cadriere and he had, no doubt, agreed between themselves. He does more, and to the end that nobody may doubt of his being resolutely determined to ruin F. Girard by any means whatsoever; persuades her to give him, before this publick Scene, a Permission in Writing to reveal, even before the Judges, the pretended Confession she had made to him; and by an almost unprecedented Sacrilege, makes no Scruple, in order to satisfy his Resentment, to disclose this Confession with the most horrid Circumstances, making that which he ought for ever to have forgotten, subservient to the Destruction of a Regular Priest like himself. We doubt not therefore but his Deposition, which he has had sufficient Leisure to compose, will discover yet better than all that we have said, that if the Cadieres have been Accomplices in this Confederacy as it is but too true, F. Nicholas has been the principal Support of their infernal Machinations.

To conclude therefore, if la Cadiere, as has been proved, has never been either a Saint, or a Demoniac; if her Brothers, the Jacobin and the Ecclesiastick, have been conscious to the Impostures of her different Conditions, and have nevertheless upheld her in them, to impose upon the Publick; if F. Nicholas has been actuated by the same Views, and has even carried them farther, which Facts must all appear from the Proceedings; if they have had Recourse to all these Artifices to ruin F. Girard; they are all guilty of Irreligion, Prophanation of our Holy Mysteries, Contempt of the Ceremonies of the Church, and the blackest Calumny that has ever been heard of.

'Tis not without the greatest Regret, and being constrained by the Necessity of a just Defence, that we find ourselves obliged thus to expose the Character and Actions of the two principal Actors in so bloody a Tragedy. Why were we not permitted to bury Crimes so odious in eternal Oblivion, were it only in Respect to their Function? But the Faults of particular Men ought not to reflect upon their Societies, which are otherwise so religious and so much to be respected. And altho' these two Fathers have either suffer'd others to insert, or have inserted themselves in la Cadiere's Defence, such slanderous and envenom'd Aspersions upon the whole Body of which F. Girard is proved to be a Member, we will not imitate their Example. On the contrary, we will take this Opportunity to declare, that the Crimes committed by them shall never deprive us of those Sentiments of Esteem and Veneration, which are so justly due to the State which they have had the Misfortune to dishonour.

[Of the POINTS depending before the COURT.]

IN vain have we proved Father Girard's Innocence, if the Proceedings which justify it, which discover the Confederacy, and lay open to the Eyes of the Court such enormous Crimes as have been perpetrated by la Cadiere and her Accomplices are null, and must be made void. But, on the other hand, how can we secure ourselves from such Attacks? How can we justify the Proceedings in Father Girard's Name, when the Plea in Abatement is made out only against the Attorney-General? This, in our Opinion, is a Dilemma into which they have designedly plung'd us; on one hand, they won't admit him to be a Party, and on the other, he is summon'd to give in his Reply, and threatened with having Advantage taken of his Silence.

La Cadiere, although summoned and co-accused, pretends contrary to the Course of Law to be the Complainant, and disputes that Title with the Attorney-General. According to her, the Council for the King ought only to join with her in her Prosecution; if she is to be believed F. Girard is convicted by the Proceedings of the most enormous Crimes; nevertheless she talks a different Language, and takes quite contrary Measures. She summons only the Attorney-General, and thereby acknowledges him as the only Party against whom the Prosecution is to be managed; and the Proceedings being made ready for a Hearing, seems to fear, that far from containing a Conviction of F. Girard, they will, on the contrary, prove the Calumny and the divers Crimes wherewith she and her Accomplices are charged.

In this Perplexity, what Course must he take? F. Girard freely owns that he is not the Plaintiff, but only the Defendant at the Petition of the Suit of the Attorney-General; he is content with lamenting in Silence the Crimes which have been committed, in order to blast his Honour and Reputation, and does not at the present sue for Vengeance. It ought to suffice him to have justify'd his Innocence; and accordingly, one would think, that his only View being answer'd by the first Part of this Memorial, he ought to leave to the Attorney-General the Care of defending the other Points that are depending before the Court; as the Appeal against the Incroachments committed by the Chancellor and Proctor upon the Liberties of the Subject; the Plea in Abatement of the Proceedings; and the Appeal from the Writ of personal Appearance. But, then, would they fail taking Advantage of his Silence? Wherefore, since la Cadriere will have Father Girard thought the Director of all that was transacted at the Bishop's Court, and that she will even pretend to show, that the sole End of these Proceedings was to procure him before-hand a Justification, which he could never have obtain'd otherwise, he is thereby oblig'd to prove their Regularity: Insomuch that without being a Party concern'd in supporting the Legality of the Proceedings, we may at least be permitted to justify them in the Form of a Representation, wherein we shall only follow at a Distance the Reply, which will be made with much more Energy by the Attorney-General.

First Incroachment, or Occasion of Complaint,

IS founded upon this; That according to the Acts of Parliament cited by Corbin and Boniface, all Judges are prohibited making Searches and Accredits in the Houses of other People, even in Case of Theft; which Acts ought to be conform'd to by the Ecclesiastical Judges, on Pain of an Incroachment, as was ordained by another Decree of the Court, made in the Case of Messire Fouque, where these Regulations were renewed with Relation even to the Chancellors of Bishopricks; whence they derive this Consequence, that the Accredit made by the Chan-

158      The MEMORIAL of
Chancellor of the Diocese of Toulon, in la Cadiere's House, without a previous Information, is an In- croachment.

Answer. First, The Point in Question is concerning an Accedit made in a criminal Case, not in a contentious Jurisdiction or Supream Co-Report is spread throughout the City of Toulon.
Miracles, of Stigmata caused by a divine Impof Magick, of Sorcery, of Enchantment, of Il- lusion, of Possession, of Exorcisms, and other Facts have happen'd in la Cadiere's House, in the Presence of the Ministers of the Cathedral, of Priests, Regulars. These Facts affect Religion, and are within the Cognizance of the Bishop of Toulon, desires to be inform'd of the Truth. To this End he orders his Great Vicar to repair to that House with the two Ministers of the Cathedral, the Pro- curator, and a Register, to draw up a verbal Report.
They make an Entrance upon the Premises, the Great Vicar draws up his verbal Report, and by this discovers that there is Room for laying an Information, and refers it to a contentious Jurisdiction, communicating this verbal Report to the Procurator.
There is nothing in this Proceeding contrary to what practis'd in like Cases, and whereof divers Examples may not be found in Descombes, Part II. p. 311, and so on.

The Assistance of the Procurator in this verbal Report of an Accedit, did not transfer to a contentious Jurisdiction a Case which was certainly within the Cognizance of the Bishop of Toulon's voluntary Jurisdiction; because the Cannon Law allows an infinite Number of Acts of the voluntary Jurisdiction, where the Function of the Procurator is nevertheless necessary. Such are for Instance, the Acts which relate to the Union of Benefices, the erecting of Livings, the Alienation of Ecclesiastical Effects, and several others.

In the second Place, supposing that this Accedit had not been only with Design to enquire into the Truth

Truth of the Facts, Miracles, Possessions, and Exorcisms, but also to discover the Crimes that had been committed ; is it not the Rule that before the lodging an Information the Body of Delinquency must be made appear ? As for Instance, when it is reported that such a one has been bruised, or assassinated, that he keeps his Bed, or his House, they begin by repairing to the House of the Person bruised or assassinated, to take his Answers, and enquire into the Authors of the Assassination.

Now, in the present Case, la Cadiere pretended by turns to be possessed and exorcis'd ; the publick Report which she had taken Care to spread, was, that 'twas by a Series of the Black-Art, and the Possession of the Devil, that Father Girard had reduced her to this Condition ; others said that she had been exorcis'd, without any Manner of Need, by her Brothers, and by Father Nicholas. As these Facts came within the Cognizance of the Great Vicar and of the Chancellor, as they were all equally important, and required that an Information should be lodged ; before this Information was taken, they make an Accedit upon the Premises to ascertain the Fact, and take Cognizance of the Body of Delinquency ; what could be more regular ?

In the third Place, there must be a Distinction made between publick Crimes, and private Offences: The first may be proceeded against at the Suit of the Proctor alone in the Bishop's Court, he having Authority to act of his own Accord ; whereas he can take no Cognizance of the latter but upon the Complaint of the civil Parties ; as it is provided by Art. 63 of the Statute of Orleans, by Art. 8 of Tit. 3, of the New Statute, and as it is observed by the Criminalists.

Now, from the Moment that the Proctor may lodge an Information of his own Accord, he may equally require the Accedit to be made upon the Premises to ascertain the Delinquency; this was adjudged by the Decree of the Council of State July 17, 1713. quoted in the New Memoirs of the Clergy, Tom. VII. Page 798, which revokes the Decree of February 21, 1713, made by this Parliament in the Cause of Messire Fouque, and which has been alledged as establishing a Principle which is destroyed by this Decree of the Council. Hence it follows, that the Acts of Parliament which prohibit Accredits being applicable only to private Offences cannot be made Precedents in the present Case. Besides, these Acts allow Accredits, when they are on Account of grievous Crimes whereof there is probable Evidence.
Pre-

Second Inroad is founded upon this; That the Chancellor entered the House of la Cadere, which was not within the Cognizance of the Bishop's Court; which is, add they, in the Chancellor, an Inroad on the Royal Justice, and so much the more condemnable, that it was only done with design to dishonour la Cadere scandalously, by forcing her to confess Facts which cover her with Shame, and which she would have bury'd in Silence.

Answer. The Question here is not to Examine whether when the Case is relating to Miracles, Possessions, or Exorcisms, it comes within the Cognizance of the Ecclesiastical Judge, even tho' the Person concern'd shou'd be of the Laity, because it affects Religion and the most sacred Mysteries; it is sufficient to observe that la Cadere forming by her own Confession the Body of Delinquency, and having declared to the Publick, that her Director was the Cause thereof, the spiritual Judge could not avoid taking Cognizance of the Matter.

Besides, what Sort of Niceness is this? La Cadere is not ashamed to Counterfeit being possess'd in publick, and to Name Father Girard as the Cause thereof; she makes herself a Sight to the whole whole Town; and would afterwards have the Account she gave to the Great Vicar, (and the two Ministers of the Cathedral, who had been present at her acting that Part) look'd upon as a greater Scandal, than that she had already caused.

Third Incroachment consists in this; That the Chancellor began the Proceedings by interrogating la Cadiere, which is an Incroachment, according to Fevret in his Treatise upon that Subject.

Answer. First, It has been already demonstrated that the only Design of this Accedit was to draw up a verbal Process of the Body of Delinquency in the voluntary Jurisdiction; wherefore the Question at present is, not to examine whether one may begin a criminal Process by an Interrogatory.

In the Second Place; the Interrogatory now in Question, is not of the same Nature with that mentioned by Fevret. The Interrogatory whereof we are now treating, is taken of her who forms the Body of Delinquency, and that mention'd by Fevret is taken of the Party accused, which makes a very sensible Difference.

Fourth Incroachment is founded upon this; That in the Complaint preferr'd by the Proctor in Consequence of the verbal Report taken at the Accedit, he has demanded (that an Information might be lodged against the Criminals) meaning by these Terms to direct his Prosecution, and the Information that was to be taken against la Cadiere.

Answer. First, By the Term Criminals, the Proctor cou'd only mean F. Girard, F. Cadiere, the Abbe Cadiere, R. Nicholas, and others who came under his Cognizance; and not la Cadiere, who by her Declaration, far from confessing herself guilty of any Fault, pretended on the contrary to have been only the Victim of the Crimes committed by these Fathers.

Secondly, If by a false Supposition it shou'd be pretended that this general Denomination of Criminals

162      The MEMORIAL of minals wou'd comprehend la Cadiere, which is not true ; Miracles, and Exorcisms, as Spiritual Things, come within the Cognizance of the Spiritual Judge, according to the Statute of Francis I.
1539. Art. 4. Fevret. Liv. 8. Chap. 3. which compares Magick and Sorcery to Heresy, the Facts relating to which are only to be ascertain'd by the Ecclesiastical Judge, according to the Statutes of Hen- ry II. 1556, and of Charles IX. 1568, even against the Laity.

Besides, Did not the Proctor require the Criminal Judge to be called in, to reclaim those who came under his Cognizance, and join with him for the priviledg'd Case?

Fifth Incroachment they found upon this, That the Moment la Cadiere preferred her Complaint before the Criminal Judge of Toulon, the Proctor hasten'd to examine Witnesses, in order to prepare Matters for the Justification of F. Girard, and thereby secure him from the Punishment due to his Crime ;
which is contrary to the Intent of the Statute, whereby it is forbid to make a Proof of any Facts tending to justify the Accused, before the Accusation is made ready for a Hearing : Besides, add they, did not he examine several who were actually then Penitents to Father Girard ?

Answer. First, It must appear by the Proceedings, that the first Witnesses were heard at la Cadiere's Request, wherefore the Proctor did not hasten to examine them to procure Facts tending to the Justification of Father Girard.

Secondly, The joining of the Civil Party can never stop the Course of publick Justice ; wherefore the Proctor, as well as the Substitute of the Attor- ney-General, who is the principal Party in publick Prosecutions, has always the Liberty of having Witnesses heard at his Request.

Thirdly,

Thirdly, The Penitents of Father Girard were become necessary Evidences, since la Cadere had not only mentioned them in her Declaration as Witnesses to all the Facts which she had advanced, but as having been themselves bewitched as well as her. Accordingly she summon'd them, as well as the Proctor, as must appear from the Proceedings; why then should she object against them as being his Penitents, when she herself has cited them for the Justification of her Complaint?

Fourthly, These Witnesses have been heard on both Sides, as well upon what resulted from the Verbal Process, as upon la Cadere's Complaint; and not upon any Fact tending to justify Father Girard. Wherefore there can be no Application of the Intent of the Statute to the present Case; and if in the End, these Penitents, who were summon'd as Witnesses, have contradicted the Facts, alledged by la Cadere in her Complaints, they were compell'd thereunto by the Obligation of a solemn Oath, and the Force of Truth.

The Last Incroachment is founded upon Oppression, which is, as they say, the Source of Appeals against Incroachments: And this Oppression consists, as they add, in all the Steps which have been taken in the Course of these Proceedings by the Spiritual Judge and Proctor.

Answer. 'Tis agreed that Oppression is the greatest of all Incroachments; and that the Appeals against Incroachments were first introduc'd with design to restrain the Attempts of that Kind made by Ecclesiastical Judges, and prevent the Subjects of his Majesty's being Oppress'd, as is observ'd by Salgado in his Treatise de Regia Protectione.

But in order to found an Appeal against Incroachments upon this Head, 'tis necessary that the Proofs of the Oppression should be so evident as
that

that it should be impossible not to see it. Now what Proofs do they bring us in the present Case? Do they consist in the superiour Orders, by Virtue whereof la Cadiere was confin'd in a Monastery? But does not all that proceeds from the Supreme Authority ought to be respected? And have the King's Subjects any other Remedy left but the Glory of Obeying? Dii tibi summum Rerum iudicare, nobis obsequi Gloria relicta est. Besides, had she not entire Liberty to Act, to see her Relations, to consult her Advocates, to take their Counsel, and wou'd she likewise have been, at Liberty have entertain'd the 'Publick with a new Scene, a feign'd Possession? Does the Oppression consist in the 2d Place, in her having been serv'd with a Writ of Personal Appearance? Cou'd she flatter herself that being convicted of Impiety, and of Profanating our holy Mysteries, the Zeal of the Attorney-General would not be inflam'd against her? Lastly, does it consist in her having been removed from Toulon to this City under a sure Guard? Cou'd it be otherwise, when it was necessary to conduct her from one Monastery to another by Virtue of Orders from above? Besides, all this was done by the Attorney-General's Authority, why then does she reproach Father Girard therewith?

If there is any Oppression in the Case, is it not Father Girard who has suffer'd it thro' the false Accusation which la Cadiere has brought against him, and which she endeavours to maintain? An Accusation, which is founded only upon Lies, and which they have no other Hopes of supporting but thro' his downright honesty, by making those Actions pass for Criminal, to which Zeal, Piety, and Credulity, prompted him, and to which he was induc'd by impostures, and an Abuse of the most sacred Mysteries.

Of the Single APPEAL brought by la Cadriere from the Proceedings of the Commissioners delegated by the Parliament to Inquire into that Affair.

WE begin by owning freely that we cannot understand what la Cadriere means, when she assures us that she does not design to contest the whole Proceedings, but only that Part of them which immediately affects her.

The Attorney-General's Complaint has been directed, as we have Reason to believe against all the Persons guilty of the Body of Delinquency committed, and their Accomplices; which comprehends la Cadriere, her Brothers, Father Nicholas, Father Girard, and all others who may have had any Share in this Body of Delinquency, whatever it may be.

The Prosecution form'd then upon this Complaint, and all the Proceedings before the Decree of Council, which refers the Cognizance to the Parliament, ought to relate to all who may be guilty of the Crimes committed, and who being conjoin'd together form the whole Body of the Delinquency. Therefore how can la Cadriere alone require to be separated from the Co-accused, and to have the Proceedings made void with respect to her, and yet leave them to subsist in full force with regard to the others? This Method of Defence is incomprehensible; wherefore let us leave to her Advocate the Care of clearing it up, and proceed to shew that the Nullities which she proposes against the Proceedings are not valid.

First NULLITY, or ERROR in the Form of the Proceedings.

THIS Nullity refers to la Cadiere's personal Answers; it is founded upon her having answered during the Adjournment of the Proceedings.

La Cadiere having been sentenced to appear personally on the 23d of last February, the Attorney-General order'd her to be acquainted with this Sentence, and had her summon'd to appear before Parliament within the Month, unless she rather chose to appear next Day, and the Days following before the Commissioners, who were then upon the Spot in the City of Toulon. She requires by Word of Mouth the Commissioners to accede to the Monastery where she was confin'd, to receive her Answer, and take her Examination; and because she did send them a Petition in Writing, she pretends that this Examination is void.

Answer. In order to destroy this Objection, it need only be observed, that every Person who is sentenc'd to appear upon Trial, is at Liberty to shorten the Time of the Adjournment and that they ought to be heard the Moment they put themselves upon Trial according to the intent of the Statute. Now as La Cadiere might have appear'd in order to be examined before the Court, the Day after her being summon'd, she might equally require the Commissioners to come to the Monastery and receive her Answers.

There was no need of her sending a Petition in Writing, because that as soon as she answer'd the Commissioners upon their acceding to the Monastery where she was confin'd, she thereby agreed that she would not take Advantage of the Respite offer'd her by the Summons, and that she accepted the Alternative offer'd in the same Summons. For if she had not been been willing to shorten the Time of the Adjournment, she needed only to have refus'd answering, and said that she accepted the Summons which had been sent her to appear before the Parliament, and not the Alternative of appearing before the Commissioners. Besides, according to la Cadiere's own Declaration, the Attorney-General sent a Petition to the Commissioners, wherein he represented to them that having sent a Tip-staff to la Cadiere to know whether she would answer, he had brought Word that she desir'd it, and therefore he required them to accede to the Monastery, and take her Examination. It was not therefore of their own Accord that the Commissioners went to the Monastery; and do not the Answers la Cadiere made to their Interrogations prove the Truth of the Attorney-General's Petition?

Second Nullity consists in this; That the Commissioners by their Decree of March 1, had order'd the extraordinary Prosecution to be commenced against Father Girard and la Cadiere only, and not against the other Parties summon'd; which is, as she alledges, dividing the Proceedings which are in their Nature not to be divided.

Answer. It is no where to be found, that the Statute directs, that, when there are several Persons summoned, they must wait till all those Persons have been examin'd, before the extraordinary Prosecution is commenced; is it not, on the contrary, order'd by the Statute, to use all Manner of Expedition for the Discovery of Crimes, and making ready the Proceedings? Wherefore as soon as one or two of the Parties summon'd appear to answer to their Charge, they ought to be heard, and the extraordinary Prosecution may be commenced against them, without prejudicing the Right of commencing it against the other Parties summon'd. This is the Intent rent of Art. 6, of Tit. 15, of the Statute, which says, That the Prosecution may be commenced at different times, especially when there are many Defendants. Besides, how can la Cadiere speak of the Indivisibility of the Proceedings, she that would render them divisible, by demanding the Abrogation of that part only which concerns her?

Third Nullity is founded upon la Cadiere & Father Girard's having been mutually confronted before that all the other Witnesses had been re-examined and confronted; whereas they ought not have been mutually confronted, till all other Witnesses had been re-examined and confronted; the being, add they, no Precedent to the contrary.

Answer. First, in order to invalidate any Proceedings, 'tis necessary to alledge an express Contravention of the Statute; now, there being not one Article of the Statute which ordains that the mutual Confronting should not be made till after the Re-examination and Confronting of all the Witnesses, the Commissioners might confront la Cadiere with Father Girard, before they proceeded to re-examine and confront the other Witnesses.

In the 2d place, does not Art. 13 of Tit 15 of the Statute direct the Writing of the Confrontings on separate Papers, and every one by itself, which necessarily supposes that one may at any Time after the Re-examination proceed to the confronting of one single Defendant, and consequently to the mutual Confronting of two, since the Confronting must be written on a separate Paper?

In the 3d place; la Cadiere, as she declares, had vary'd in her Answers; wherefore this mutual Confronting was become necessary thereby, in order the better to discover the Truth of her Answers.

Fourth Nullity consists in their having proceeded to the Re-examination of the Witnesses, whereas the extraordinary Prosecution had not yet been ordered against against Father Nicholas the Prior of the Carmelites, and the Cadieres her Brothers; altho' the Witnesses thus re-examin'd ought to have been confronted with them, as they were afterwards.

Answer. According to the Intent of the Art. 6, of Tit. 15, of the Criminal Statute, the Re-examination ought never to be repeated, altho' it should be made in the Absence of the Party accused, and the Prosecution should be begun at different Times, or there should be several Parties accused. Wherefore in the present Case, when there was two of the Parties accused who appeared to answer, and had undergone their Examination, the extraordinary Prosecution might, and ought to be order'd against them, all the Witnesses ought to be re-examined by Virtue of this Order for an extraordinary Prosecution; and when la Cadriere's Brothers, and Father Nicholas, appear'd afterwards to be heard, they ought to be confronted with the Witnesses already re-examined; and if they had proceeded to another Re-examination, it would have been a Contravention of the Statute, to which they expressly conform'd themselves.

The Last Nullity they make consist in this, That several Witnesses who were heard at la Cadriere's Request, were not confronted with Father Girard.

Answer. According to the Intent of Art. 1. Tit. 15, of the Statute, the Re-examination and confronting of Witnesses, is required only so far as the Judge finds that the Witnesses charge the Accused, and it is left to the Discretion of the Judge either to proceed therein, or to omit a Re-examination, and a Confronting that would be useless. Besides, tho' it were true that these Witnesses had accused Father Girard, (as la Cadriere affirms) the not having confronted them, would be no Nullity, since the Court might order their Confronting.

Of the ROYAL LETTERS of Restitution.

BY these Royal Letters La Cadiere demands to be restor'd to her former Rights, as to the Confessions made by her in her Answers of February : in her Re-examination, and in her being mutually confronted with Father Girard on the 6th of March following. She defends the granting of these Letters. First, Because these Confessions are contrary to her Declaration, and to what appears, as she says, from the Proceedings. Secondly, Because these Confessions were the Effects of a Draught which she was made to take, and of the Violence that was offer'd to her. Thirdly, Because of the Renunciation made by her the 10th of March following.

Answer. First, La Cadiere's Demand of these Royal Letters has already been tacitly rejected; and even expressly : for having by a particular Petition desired to Answer afresh to the Accusations, on Pretence that her Answers were the Effects of a Potion, and the Violence that was used to her, this Petition was rejected ; wherefore she cannot at present obtain the same Advantage by a Subterfuge, and by the Favour of a Restitution, which is never granted as to Confessions made by the Parties Accused.

In the 2d Place, la Cadiere, in her State of the Case, is full of nothing but the pretended Confessions made by Father Girard ; she maintains that these Confessions amount to a compleat Proof ; that 'tis to the Obligation of a solemn Oath, to the Force of Truth, and to the Perplexity wherein Father Girard was, on his not being able to disguise the Truth, that these Confessions are owing, which can no more be recall'd. Why shou'd not the same Principles be in force against her ? Why shou'd not she submit to the same Law ?

In the 3d Place, la Cadiere's Declaration not amounting to any degree of Proof, and being even founded only upon extraordinary Facts, which are destitute even of probability, it is not to be thought strange that in her Answers she has abandon'd Ideas that were not supported by any Proof.

In the 4th Place, Who ever heard of a Potion of such a Specifick Nature as to regulate and direct the Answers which one is 'to make to Interrogatories? It was certainly reserved for la Cadiere to ascribe to such a Motive the Confession she has made of the Truth.

In the 5th Place, Of what Nature was the Violence exercis'd upon her? Her Answers were made in the Presence, and upon the Interrogations of the Commissioners, which excludes all Pretence of Constraint and Force; accordingly she alledges no Proofs of Constraint but what were subsequent to her Answers, and consequently cou'd have no retroactive Effect.

In the 6th Place, she persevered in her Confessions from February 27 to March 10 following, that is to say 12 Days; now, cou'd this Draught, which she alledges as the Cause of her Confessions, have an Effect upon her during such a long Time? And cou'd the Impression, which the Violence that was offered her had made upon her Spirit, subsist whilst she had the Liberty of seeing her Mother, her Brothers, and her other Relations, who, being all exasperated against Father Girard, did not certainly approve her having made Confessions contrary to their Designs? Accordingly, the Retractation of these Confessions is owing to their Sollicitations.

In the 7th Place, Can they seriously bring as a Proof of this Constraint, her Retractation of her Confessions? It wou'd be a very convenient way of freeing ourselves from the Engagements which we contract, to alledge, as a Motive to invalidate these Engage-Engagements, our being disposed to recede from them. Finally, It has never been known in Criminal Cases, that a Liberty has been given to take Lettres of Restitution as to Confessions made in the Course of the Proceedings.

Of the APPEAL from the Writ of Personal Appearance serv'd on la Cadiere, and from the Writ of single Appearance, issued against Father Girard.

THE Writs which are serv'd upon the Co-accused, are always proportion'd according to what appears from their Charges. Wherefore, as soon as we have related the Matters of Fact, as soon as we have refuted the different Heads of the Accusation form'd against Father Girard, and have discover'd the Source of the Calumny, the Motives whereon it is founded, with the odious Methods that have been us'd to maintain it, we have thereby proved the Justice of the Writs. Besides, to what purpose is it to demand a Reformation of the Writs at the Time that, on one Hand, the whole Proceedings are drawn up, and the Cause is ready to be finally determin'd; and, on the other hand, Father Girard has offer'd to go to Prison with the Co-accused, being satisfy'd, as he is, of his own Innocence, and being only alarm'd with a just Fear, with which Charity inspires him, even in Favour of his Slanderers.

So concludes as in pleading.

Levans Attorney.*
